CHARLESTON -- The Cousins Three and Ann Merick were named winners in their respective divisions at the sixth annual Kiwanis club talent show Wednesday night.

The Cousins Three, composed of Debby and Mike Pobst of Vanduser and David Pobst of Bell City, won first place in the 6 to 12 year old category.

Second place in the 6-12 age group went to a dance group from Wickliffe, Ky., and third place was won by Tommy Merick of Bernie.

In the senior division, ages 13-22, Miss Merick of Bernie performed an acrobatic ballet. Second place went to Patti McMullin of Sikeston for a vocal solo, and third place was won by Barbara and Joe Stricker, Charleston folk singers.

First place prize was $25, second, $15, and third, $10, in each division.

Eleven acts were entered in the junior division and 13 in the senior division.

Judges were Dr. Robert Jones, music faculty, Southeast Missouri State College, and Dr. Larry Grisvard, director of theatre, Southeast Missouri State College, both of Cape Girardeau.

Picking Delayed

No cotton picking is expected in the Sikeston area until the last week in September, approximately three weeks late.

There are no out-of-area labor needs for harvest, the Missouri Employment Service office reports. No labor is available for out-of-area movement. The office is unable to fill orders on hand.

The weather has been ideal for growing crops in the Poplar Bluff area. Labor supply and demand is in balance. There are few applications of qualified persons on file for farm jobs.

The transporting of crews from the Bootheel to the apple harvest in the Lexington-Waverly area was officially in progress Aug. 26. James Whitehorn and a crew of 32 workers left the Kennett area to harvest apples at Peters Orchards at Waverly.

The next crew to depart the Kennett area was expected to leave Tuesday for the Lexington fruit harvest.

General farm work in the Kennett area is seasonally slow with some cotton growers predicting they will have cotton to pick by the middle of September.

Farm labor supply and demand are fairly well in balance in the Cape Girardeau area. Ten male workers, 18 to 55, for cannery work for Wisconsin. The wage rate is $1.32 per hour.

Donald "Ricky" Woods

Woods Boy Critical From Fall

Little improvement has been noted in the condition of Donald "Ricky" Woods, 11, who suffered a brain concussion Monday when he fell from a horse on the Castor Alsup farm south of Miner.

He is in critical condition at the Baptist Hospital in Memphis in an intensive care unit.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Woods, route 2. He is in the sixth grade at Matthews School.

Mrs. Woods reported today that doctors have not decided on surgery, but if a blood clot is found an operation to remove it will be required.

Results of X-rays taken Wednesday are not known but no clot appeared in the first X-rays.

"He recognized us sometimes when he was aroused, and at other times he did not," Mrs. Woods said.

The youth suffered two small skull fractures, numerous bruises, but no broken bones in the fall. One eye has swollen shut, Mrs. Woods said.

He is semi-conscious most of the time and tires easily when awakened.

The injuries resulted when "Old Pete," the horse he was riding became entangled in wire threw the youth. The horse fell and the saddle horn struck the boy on the head.

Gemini Flight All Set

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — America's Gemini 11 astronauts, confident and ready to shatter space records, relaxed today as preparations clicked smoothly toward a doubleheader launch Friday.

Project officials gave a go-ahead to fuel the 90-foot-tall, Gemini-Titan 2 rocket this morning. Except for brief meetings with project officials, Gemini 11 pilots Charles Conrad Jr. and spacewalker-to-be Richard F. Gordon Jr. planned only a casual review of their flight plan while relaxing in crew quarters here.

"We've endeavored to lay this flight plan out so we have a chance of doing everything," Navy Lt. Cmdr. Gordon said, "and we think we've got that chance. I couldn't ask for a better flight."

Goals of their planned 71-hour mission include a rapid rendezvoud with the Agena target satellite on Gemini 11's first orbit using the Agena's main engine to scoot them to a record altitude of 863 miles, flying in formation with the Agena while tied to it by a 100 foot cord, and performing an automatic "hands-off" re-entry.

Gordon, 36, rookie astronaut, plans two ventures outside Gemini 11 —a 107-minute stroll during Gemini 11's second day aloft and a 140-minute "space stand" the third day, when the spaceman pops the upper half of his body outside the spaceship to photograph stars.

Navy Cmdr. Conrad, veteran of the eight-day Gemini 5 flight slightly more than a year ago, and Gordon are to blast off at 10:25 a.m. Friday, 97 minutes after their Atlas-Agena target rocket roars skyward at 8:48 a.m.

Rendezvous on Gemini 11's of the gamut of rendezvous," said Charles W. Mathews, Gemini program manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Manned Spacecraft Center. "In other words, this is about as short as you can do a rendezvous."

"The biggest thing," Conrad said, is not that it's a first-or-big rendezvous but the fact that "we're going to do it on our own. It's the first crack at doing it with our own information and no help from the ground."

Woman Dies In Collision

Mrs. Dora Hixson, 54, Leeper, a passenger in a 1956 Chevrolet driven by her husband, Charles Hixson, 68, was killed, when their car pulled out of a driveway into the path of another automobile.

The accident occurred Wednesday at 12:10 p.m. on highway 67 in Neelyville.

The Hixson car collided with a 1966 Mercury, driven by Eugene Ramatowski, 23, Maryville, Ill., injuring his passenger, Robert Porter, 30, Springfield, Ill. Porter was taken to the Doctor's hospital in Poplar Bluff suffering internal injuries.

The body of Mrs. Hixson was taken to the Frank Cotrell Funeral Home in Poplar Bluff.

Two persons were injured yesterday at 7:05 a.m. near a construction site, one and one-half miles west of Dexter on a country road.

A 1966 Chevrolet, driven by Martin Poetz, 25, Dexter, skidded into a 1957 Pontiac, driven by Annie Craft, 22, Bernie, who had stopped at the site over a hill. The Pontiac sideswiped a 1949 Chevrolet, owned by Wilson Crag, 30, Dexter, parked beside the road.

Poetz received several broken teeth and was treated by a Dexter doctor and Doris Atkins, 33, Dexter, a passenger in the Craft car, was bruised, and treated at the Doctor's Hospital.

A collision on Interstate 55 yesterday at 4 p.m., three miles south of Miner, caused a back injury to Mrs. Shelby Wilkerson, 24, Fredericktown, who was taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

She was a passenger in a 1966 Mercury, driven by Shelby Wilkerson, 24, Fredericktown.

The car was following a 1963 Ford truck, driven by Carl Rudisill, 29, Sikeston, pulling a combine. An unidentified tractor-trailer passed the Ford truck, when the Ford truck pulled into the lane of the Mercury.

Ruben King, 64, Hayti, was injured last night at 8:30 p.m. on highway 84, at the edge of Hayti.

He was driving a 1959 Volkswagen and pulled in front of a 1966 Dodge, driven by Bill West, 34, Bragg City.

The Widening War

By Conrad Fink
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, THAILAND (AP) --Viet Nam's war virtually has become a wider and more dangerous Southeast Asian war with fighting exploding on or from the soil of five countries.

Stepped - up air and ground combat is involving not only North and South Viet Nam but also to various degrees neighboring Laos, Cambodia and Thailand.

And in addition to soldiers of both Viet Nams and the United States, the war today is being fought by troops or support personnel from Thailand, the Philippines, South Korea, Australia and New Zealand.

With war thus knocking at more and more doors, the atmosphere in Southeast Asia is thick with fear that even greater conflict could erupt.

Thailand's foreign minister, Thanat Khoman, has declared that the war "poses a great threat" to peace and stability in the entire region.

Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand, using their newly-created Association of Southeast Asia as a forum, have called for concerted peace efforts from the people most directly involved -- Asians.

Here in Thailand, which officially is holding the Viet Nam war at arm's length, signs of involvement are everywhere.

At Bangkok Airport, the thunder of U.S. Air Force jets assaults the ears of casual tourists. In the remote northeastern village of Mu Mon, the headman proudly shows visitors the twisted propeller of a U.S. plane that crashed nearby.

Thailand, while fighting its own small - scale Communist insurrection, has sent an Air Force contingent to Viet Nam and is providing the U.S. Air Force with valuable real estate from which to fight.

Cape, Marshall Women Help Each Other Bear Loss of Missing Girls

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP)—A Cape Girardeau mother of ten and a Marshall, Mo., grandmother have been writing to each other for more than a year since each lost a child, tragically and mysteriously.

"How my heart aches for you because, you see, I know how your heart aches," Mrs. C. O. Reynolds, 61, of Marshall wrote to Mrs. Harry Gill, 39, of Cape Girardeau after little Betsy Gill disappeared July 13, 1965.

Mrs. Reynolds' granddaughter, 9-year-old Denise Clinton, was kidnaped a month earlier during an armed robbery of a motel Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds managed.

"I know that we are of different religions," Mrs. Gill wrote, "but each of us serve the same God and I pray for Denise and Betsy every day." Mrs. Gill is a Roman Catholic, Mrs. Reynolds, a missionary Baptist.

Mrs. Gill and her husband said they still believe their daughter-who would have celebrated her fourth birthday Aug. 21- - is still alive. And Mrs. Reynolds said "I, like Mrs. Gill, still have hopes that my Denise is found alive."

Police in Cape Girardeau, who joined the townspeople to search the Mississippi river front when Betsy disappeared, have expanded their efforts to all 50 states.

Mrs. Gill--who speaks wistfully about her daughter-said she had been called on to make ten identifications.

"But, it's always the same story -- it's never Betsy," she said. Mrs. Gill commends Police Chief Irvin Beard.

"He's more than just a policeman," she said. "He is a real friend and has spent innumerable hours attempting to place the pieces of the puzzle."

Mrs. Gill said she writes to Mrs. Reynolds every two or three months. "She understands, it helps to correspond with her," she said.

Mrs. Reynolds is also grateful she has someone who knows her problem.

"Her letters to me were most encouraging to me," Mrs. Reynolds said.

Viet Cong Steps up Efforts To Wreck Election

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) —Viet Cong terrorists killed at least six persons and injured more than 20 today in scattered attacks aimed at wrecking election machinery and frightening as many as possible of South Viet Nam's five million voters from the polls Sunday.

While U.S. officials sought to determine whether saboteurs or a short circuit might have caused a million-dollar fire that destroyed one American military warehouse and damaged another before dawn, the Viet Cong tried again to block the main shipping channel to Saigon.

A Communist mine exploded harmlessly in the river channel about 40 yards from a U.S. Navy minesweeper.

Highlighting intertwined military and political developments:

——Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, in a roundabout discourse with newsmen, put himself back in the list of possible candidates for the presidency in the creation of a new government due next year. He said in effect he was reconsidering his decision to return to military duty and might run because of the refusal of his first choice, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, to become a candidate. Thieu is chief of state in the present military regime.

——The most savage in a series of operations by Communist agents to sabotage the election Sunday of a 117-member Constituent Assembly was staged at a village southwest of Saigon. A government spokesman said the Communist agents killed a government security agent, his wife and three children.

Registration for General Election Going Slowly

Registration for the Nov. 8 general election has been going slow, City Clerk John Vaughn reported today. The deadline for registration, Oct. 11, is 34 days away.

About 7,000 residents are registered in the city, Vaughn said.

Registration is expected to increase as the election draws nearer.

Registered voters, who have voted in any of the last two primary or general elections need not reregister, Vaughn said.

Anyone who has failed to vote in the past two general elections or the past two primaries must reregister before the deadline, Vaughn said.

Anyone who has moved into the city or anyone who has become 21 since the last election or will be 21 by Nov. 8, must register before the deadline, if they wish to vote, Vaughn added.

To vote in the general election a person must be 21 or older at the date of the election, have lived in the state for one year, in the county for 60 days and in the precinct he will vote 10 days.

If a person moves from one precinct to another after having registered once, he may call in his change of address to the city clerk and will not be required to reregister in person because of the move.

He visited Poplar Bluff, Caruthersville, Hayti, Portageville, Bragg City, New Madrid and Charleston, before arriving in Sikeston.

He has visited towns north of Columbia to get acquainted with the state. The tour of Southeast Missouri is his longest to date.

Mr. and Mrs. Weaver toured a cotton gin in Bragg City Wednesday, saw the Delta Center at Portageville, and briskly visited other towns in the area.

They spent the night in Sikeston, after a get together with townspeople and school officials at the Lee Bowman residence, 4 Bel Air. Several of his Sikeston greeters are members of the University of Missouri Alumni association.

Today the president and his party will tour Cape Girardeau. Then swing north through Fredricktown and Festus.

Traveling with the new president and his wife are: G. H. "Bus" Entsminger, assistant to the president for development of alumni activities; C. Brice Ratchford, vice president in charge of the extension division, and Thomas Richter, public relations assistant.

The new president is the fourteenth man to hold the office. He assumed his new duties Sept. 1. POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

DELTA POVERTY AND POLITICS

The Missouri Bootheel's war on poverty has been disrupted by a political fight, and it must be restored as a service to the poor, not to the politicians.

This battle began when J. V. Conran, veteran New Madrid county political leader, decided to return to the public stage with a bang. He had himself elected to fill a county vacancy on the board of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corp. He then led the board in a 14-9 vote to fire the corporation's director, Earl L. Williams. Immediately thereafter, Mr. Conran managed a second meeting, after some of the board members had gone home, and by 9 to 3 chose Marion West, Poplar Bluff cattle farmer and employe of the State Department of Agriculture, to succeed Mr. Williams.

The Kansas City regional office of the Office of Economic Opportunity, which pays the salaries of the Delta corporation's staff, ruled that the West appointment was illegal. It accepted the Williams discharge.

The politics involved almost seems to reach to the gubernatorial level. Mr. Conran is a strong supporter of Gov. Hearnes; Don V. Thomason, OEO regional director, backed the Governor's primary opponent. However, there is little evidence that the Governor had anything to do with initiating the Delta events. J. V. Conran appears to have moved into a leadership gap on his own initiative.

Mr. Conran's critics say the Delta corporation controls a good deal of spending and has helped many hundreds of people, and could be misused as a source of political power. If Mr. Conran's motives are nonpolitical, he'll have to prove it to a skeptical public. The best way to do that is to assist the next Delta corporation board meeting to name a thoroughly independent and capable director, on whom all factions can agree, and to make sure that he enjoys full freedom from political interference. We shall see what we shall see.

Editors Note:

Dear Joe: Post Dispatch Publisher.

You are so afraid of politics getting into the war on poverty. Do you mean the J. V. Conran kind or the Don Thomason kind?

All we can find out about the program is that the paying jobs are pretty heavy with ex-Governor Dalton's and the establishment's released friends.

You pay attention to the future accomplishments under the new regime and we will have a new regime no matter what Mr. Thomason does.

GOOD ADVERTISING HEADLINES

GOOD NEWSPAPER advertising headlines are those that make the quickest, simplest, and most believable impression on the reader. So said a wise advertising man years ago.

He listed the following rules for good advertising headlines:

1. There must be appeal to the right audience.
2. The headlines must be easy to understand and be direct.
3. The headlines must be brief and have a quick message.
4. The headlines must be believable and self-proving.
5. There must be appeal to readers.
6. The headlines must have self-interest to draw the attention of the reader.

Other good elements for headlines, he said, include news, timeliness, testimonials, sex appeal, free, curiosity, and price.

The pages of popular periodicals reverberate with alarming accounts of the awful crush of cars on city streets.

Writers predict that some day the millenium will arrive: Cars will become wedged into every space on the highways and traffic will grind to the final halt.

The only recourse, they say, will be to pour concrete over those cars and start all over again.

But, hasn't anyone noticed how crowded the sidewalks are?

It's so crowded on State Street in Chicago during the noon hour that a pedestrian could retract his legs as if they were landing gear and ride to his destination without touching the sidewalk.

On Fifth Avenue in New York, the crowd picks the destination -- you just avoid being trampled.

It's so crowded on Sepulveda Boulevard in Los Angeles that only your head gets wet when it rains.

This "horde" environment has produced a new breed of man -- Pedestrian Man.

Pedestrain Man has glazed eyes. He seems insensitive to his surroundings.

It is well that he should adapt this way. If he didn't, police would be breaking up fist fights at every downtown street corner.

As it is, pedestrians don't seem to notice the jolt as they bounce off each other. They stride boldy into the packs of people at street corners to be jostled and crushed like the center in a quarterback sneak, only to emerge chatting unconcernedly with their companions.

Even the most nonchalant pedestrian, however, doesn't like the crush. What we really need, he would agree, are four-level sidewalks.

A NEW LOOK AT CENSORSHIP

Jack J. Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, was expected to present a new draft of the movie industry's self-censorship code at an MPAA board meeting in New York on Tuesday (Sept. 6).

THAT OLD WHITE HOUSE HAND, Jack J. Valenti, who once told a dinner audience that he "slept better" because Lyndon B. Johnson was in the White House, is taking his first step towards liberalizing the film industry's self-censorship code. In a memo sent to the nation's major film company presidents, as "a springboard for discussion," Valenti proposes voluntary classification of motion pictures.

Valenti met on Sept. 6 with the board of the Motion Picture Association of America, which he has headed since leaving the President's staff some four months ago, but his confidential memo suggests that considerable discussion is still required to "define the boundaries beyond which responsible filmmakers voluntarily will not go."

Work on a new Motion Picture Code goes back until at least last fall. Valenti is reported to have granted high priority to the revision in the light of two recent exemptions to the restrictions of the 30-year-old present Code. One was for the shirty language in Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The other was for the abortion scene in Alfie.

It was clear that Warner Brothers was going to release a picture on which it had spent $7 1/2 million, seal of approval or no seal, so Valenti's problem with Who's Afraid really was academic. The box office record of the film gives a sort of chancy ex post facto justification for the exemption.

THE SELF-CENSORSHIP imposed by the MPAA Production Code Association has been weakened seriously in the past decade, in part by the release of independently produced films without a Code seal of approval. The antitrust decree of 1950 divorcing producers from theatre ownership took away from the Association a powerful economic weapon for keeping potential Code violators in line.

A classification system of self-censorship would involve identification by the MPAA of films in various categories -- such as "For Mature Adults," and so on. The National Catholic Office for Motion Pictures already classifies films in that fashion. Britain has a similar system.

MAJOR FILM DISTRIBUTORS have long opposed classification. They are fearful, among other things, of laying themselves open to antitrust actions. But Valenti is selling classification by the industry as a way of avoiding uninformed state and local censorship. Only Maryland and the city of Chicago at present have local licensing laws requiring that a film be submitted for approval before showing.

Valenti said to the exhibitors: "If you will cooperate, we can together beat the local know-nothings. But if you don't cooperate, we will sooner or later have to submit to governmental classification."

In this connection it is perhaps significant to report that plans have been announced by the producers of the forthcoming Ulysses -- from the James Joyce novel -- to show it simultaneously in three-day runs in 135 theatres in this country and 15 abroad. The mass quickie release is designed to avoid local censorship, of course.

A LINE OF MODERATION

When a Special White House Assistant for Consumer Affairs was appointed some 18 months ago, numbers of interested people feared -- or hoped as the case might be -- that this would be followed by an "antibusiness" campaign, in which the consumer would be depicted as a helpless innocent, wide open to the ravages of heartless, money-hungry producers, retailers and others concerned with the consumer trades.

That, happily, has not happened. The head of the new agency, Mrs. Esther Peterson, has found a great deal that is good in the way the American consumer is served. She has stressed the need for more aggressive efforts to eliminate true consumer frauds --a goal with which every legitimate businessman is in complete sympathy. And as one authority puts it, the new program she is directing " . . . recognizes that too many people have been assuming too much with respect to the kinds of protection the consumer needs. Consumer education -- to teach the consumer how to look out for herself -- is getting more attention, and business organizations will have a chance to play their part."

If new legislation in the consumer's interest proves to be really needed, it will come into being. But the big point is that a good many people who claim to speak for the consumer have vastly exaggerated that need. It is a simple matter to take some isolated incident of chicanery and blow it up until it appears to be a general practice. It is equally easy to make consumers as a whole seem ignorant and ill-prepared to make their dollars do proper duty -- when, as every producer and retailer knows, the great bulk of them are exceedingly canny buyers who can't be stung twice.

In any event, it is to be hoped the government's consumer policy continues along a line of moderation. The sound business - consumer relationship that exists has much to do with our unequalled living standards.

OFFBEAT CHARACTERS

A funny thing happened on the Throckmortons' vacation this year.

They came back rested and relaxed. How about THAT!

It was simple, really. All they did was decide they wouldn't try for the mileage they had made in the past but concentrate instead on enjoying what they did see.

This deprived them, of course of the chance to see four marvelous, mystifying caves, 176 reptile zoos, 12 rocks that look like elephant heads, 498 roadside hot dog stands, two cliffs off which Indian maidens had jumped when disappointed in love and 23 unannounced detours.

But it did permit them to sleep later each morning, take it easier during the day's travel, indulge in pauses to enjoy special scenic panoramas and historical sites and even to relax a little before they ate their evening meal.

In fact, the Throckmortons insist they actually enjoyed the unusual arrangement. And they are reasonably sure that in time their friends will stop regarding them as some sort of oddballs."

THE CAMEL AGAIN

The bill for creating a Department of Housing and Urban Development at the Cabinet level, in the form in which it has passed the House and is now before the Senate, is a fairly mild sort of proposal. Its principal effect would be to combine certain activities now carried on by existing agencies.

But, it seems very clear, this is intended to be only a start. For, as one of the bill's principal congressional supporters sees it, the new department would ultimately be responsible for "all activities and problems making up the life of the city dweller."

This is quite a mouthful. The city dweller's problems run a wide spectrum indeed -- traffic congestion, air pollution, recreational wants, unemployment, soaring local taxes, and so on and so on. Is the federal government to assume the responsibility of trying to solve them all? If so, we might as well abandon city and other local governments and hand Washington a blank check.

The camel, one remembers, just got his nose into the tent at the beginning -- but before long he filled the whole tent. The current bill looks like an example of that.

Where could all the guys be who got so angry at Harry Truman because he refused MacArthur permission to bomb China in the Korean war?

Evidently L.B.J. took that one under this time in Viet Nam. Looks like it just stirred up a hornets nest, so to speak. Seems like after all is said and done farmers have more hoss sense than city bred eggheads.

H. L. Hunt Says

RESEMBLANCES

Lake Village, Arkansas, where I lived, had one movie theater. During a children's contest to name persons pictured on screen, when the Secretary of Commerce was shown they shouted, "Mr. Hunt!"

Some years later a crowd kept following me around New York's Roosevelt Hotel lobby. Inquiring why, I was told they were trying to catch up with the President of the United States. After his term, Mr. Herbert Hoover and I became good friends. Sometimes someone would greet me as "Chief", an indication they were his close friends.

In 1952 I wanted General MacArthur to win the Presidential nomination; Mr. Hoover wanted Taft. Forty-two hours before the nominating speeches he persuaded Senator Taft to switch the Taft-MacArthur delegates to MacArthur. Four - and - a -half hours later Taft decided to swith AFTER the first ballot. Douglas MacArthur was within 4 1/2 hours of being nominated, would have been elected, and this would be a different world today.

At a February 22 banquet I was seated alongside Senator Byrd, who introduced the speaker, Herbert Hoover. As the banquet and speeches ended, we walked toward the door, Mr. Hoover surrounded by admirers. Several guests rushed to me saying, "Great talk, Chief," or "Wonderful speech, Mr. President." Not wishing to embarrass them, I shook hands warmly.

A waiter at Washington's Carlton Hotel solicitously asked, "What are you having tonight, Mr. Lewis?" Apologizing he said, "Mr. John L. Lewis is usually at this table."

From London to the Middle East no one mistook me for Winston Churchill, but several mentioned our resemblance. None ever admitted that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Churchill looked alike! HLH

Unions Champion Big Business In 'Socialist' Sweden

Vasteras, Sweden: -- Once, all the King's men in armor fought to drive the invader out of this old silver, copper and iron mining town. That was 900 years ago. But the lore of antiquity has not fuzzed Sweden's sophisticated sense of modernity.

Here, today, they don't try to destroy each other. In the very shadow of the old castle, for example, a very modern publisher, indeed, talking of his purchase of costly experimental presses, said that no newspaper in Sweden had lost a single day because of a strike since 1919. Here, they have peace pacts with the printing craft unions -- running from seven to 10 years.

Only one major newspaper has died -- and that's because it just could not get the circulation. Oddly, it was the Stockholm morning daily owned by the Landsorganisationen i Severige (LO) -- the labor movement itself. But it was not struck out of existence.

I went west here to talk with the top executives of the "ASEA," the General Electric of Sweden, and to go down into the subterranean atom bomb shelters all communities must build. It was during lunch as guest of the town fathers that I got another view of the Swedish labor movement -- supposedly "Socialist."

I dropped my forkful of tiny shrimp souffle when Thjeivar Hedberg, city manager here, said that Vasteras is the world's first city to put its mailmen on a piece rate pay system. I asked if the post office workers union had objected to its members being paid on a per letter delivered basis. "Oh no," said the Stadsdirektor. "They like it." It pays more and we have a fine mail delivery."

Piece work, abhored and fought by American unions, is universal throughout Sweden. Between 85 and 90 per cent of all workers -- including many white collar and technical people -- earn their living under this pay system.

Swedish unions like it -- and five local labor officials here as well as Arne Geijer, the George Meany-Walter Reuther of Sweden have corroborated this --- because it pays better. Swedish industrialists like it because it has given them a productivity increase of from seven to eight and sometimes ten per cent a year.

Furthermore, the big labor organization "LO" and the other four union federations never fight automation. They encourage it. The speedier the induction of labor-saving machinery, the higher the efficiency of plants, the bigger the profit of companies and the quicker the escalating of wages.

Some hours before I got here, it had been truly fantastic to sit in the inner sanctum of Sweden's biggest bank, the Svenska Handelsbanken in Stockholm and hear Tore Browaldh, its president, talk as glowingly of Arne Geijer, the LO (AFL-CIO) president of the Swedish Trade Union Confederation, as the union chiefs talked of the bank, which is the world's 55th largest and strictly capitalist although it seeks the little man's accounts.

"Unions press for rapid change," said he, "of industrial structure. It may sound sensational to you but in Sweden, trade unions state openly that full employment can never imply that a man should stay forever at the same bench in the same factory, in the same place. The union chiefs say that inefficient factories must be closed, the men must be retained and moved to expanding and dynamic industries, maybe in other parts of the country.

"Government, business and trade unions are interested in a high degree of flexibility; they want technological change as fast as it can be introduced. They push for automation. They want the optimum allocation of manpower resources and capital."

Banker Browaldh chuckled as I stared. "There are times," he added, "when the labor leaders criticize the banks for lending money to inefficient businesses.

"We do it," he asserted, "because we occasionally feel that new management might save the business, but the unions chide us. They want big profitable firms so they can share in the pudding."

Both in Vasteras and Stockholm I learned of the LO's (labor) fight to get Swedish business a good tax break. Unlike the AFL-CIO, Sweden's LO does not clamor for higher corporation tax. Though the union's own political organization, the (Social Democratic) Labor Party, has been in power for decades, the corporate tax has been at 40 per cent. In the States it has ranged between 48 and 52 per cent.

Back in 1955, the unions actually fought their own labor prime minister and the Labor Party in power because the labor administration was preparing to cut into industry's tax privileges.

Until then, the corporations had instant depreciation of machinery and equipment. In other words, they bought some big hardware and wrote the entire thing off as an immediate tax deduction in one year. The government wanted to change this. The unions fought on behalf of the employers and there was a compromise which gave business a chance to write off the depreciation at the rate of 60 per cent in the first two years.

Of course, profits are bigger. But so are rates. And there are no poor, no slums, no hungry -- and no Socialism either. This is a more conservative land than England, France, Italy and the U.S. rolled into one.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Debate on the new minimum wage bill was progressing in the senate. A page looked over the assembled senators' picked out the man who for years has been the most consistent champion of labor and whispered in his ear. Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., got up and followed the page out to the long waiting room near the Vice President's office where the public can confer with senators between votes and roll calls.

Awaiting Morse where two registered lobbyists for the AFL-CIO who wanted to express their views on the minimum wage bill. Morse listened carefully. Then he said:

"By the way, I read that editorial in the Portland Labor Paper calling me a strike-breaker. Tell George Meany I know where it came from".

Morse referred to AFL-CIO President Meany's criticism of the senator for introducing a bill permitting the seizure of the airlines by the government in order to end the airline machinists' strike.

"Because you supported me, don't get the idea that you owe me," Morse continued to the labor lobbyists. "Tell Meany that I'll fight for labor when it's right and I'll fight against labor when it's wrong. In the case of the airline strike, the protection of the dollar against inflation was more important than increased wages for labor.

"Name any other senator who has been as staunch a champion of labor when you were right and needed help," Morse continued. "Name any other senator who stood up and made the kind of speech I did against 14-B.

"Don't call me off the floor again," concluded the senator from Oregon, "and tell Meany to go to hell."

EXPLOITING CHILD LABOR?

The senator went back to the debate on the child labor portion of the minimum wage act, to vigorously oppose the AFL-CIO and Sen. Jacob Javits on his amendment prohibiting children under 12 from working on farms, also prohibiting children under 14 from working unless they commute or work with their parents.

"We are dealing primarily with boys and girls who want to work during the vacation period," Morse said. "In most cases where there is a desire on the part of boys and girls to work, the work is good for them. In my state during the strawberry and raspberry picking seasons, even the schools organize the children into groups to go out and pick on a voluntary basis.

"They do this under the supervision of the Sunday school, the YMCA, the YWCA, the Boy Scout and Girl Scout programs.

"What is the effect of the work on these children? Well I am the father of three daughters. Through our church in my home town, the children would get up very early and go down to the center and at 7 o'clock in the morning they would jump on trucks and go out to work under adult supervision.

"Does the senator from New York accuse me of exploiting my daughters? They were beneficiaries of this program. They learned some important things.

"I will tell the senators what will happen if this source of labor is curtailed. The crops will not be picked, and that means they will not be planted.

"If there was an exploitation of these boys and girls I would fight it," concluded the senator from Oregon.

Sen. Morse won his point. The Javits amendment was defeated.

PRIZE FARMER

Out of his farm in Poolesville, Md., Morse does not employ child labor. In fact he employs only one middle - aged man. He does draft Mrs. Morse; and on weekends if you drop by the Morse farm, you will find Mrs. Morse busy writing ear - tag numbers in the herd book while the senator herds his prize red devons into a chute, grabs their ears and reads off the numbers tattooed on the inside.

At the opening of the Gaithersburg, Md., Fair the other day, the senator from Oregon turned up with his exhibits. He was accompanied by only one man. Together they placed 83 hens and roosters in cages, tied up 28 red devon bulls, heifers and cows in the cattle shed.

When the fair was over, the senator had collected 77 prizes on his 83 chickens, 22 prizes on his 28 head of cattle. More important, he had a wonderful time.

CRANK PHONE CALLS

A bill to outlaw crank phone calls to Viet Nam servicemen and their families has been languishing in the House Judiciary Committee for 11 months. Meanwhile, the phone calls continue.

Midnight callers have been especially harassing the mother of Navy Pilot Frederick Palmer, who led the first carrier - based air strike on Haiphong's oil dumps.

U. S. troops in Viet Nam have received so many complaints from home about the nasty phone calls that many now fear to give their names and addresses to newsmen covering the war.

LONDON (AP) — "This is," said the man behind the drugstore counter, "the first hangover cure we've ever offered the public."

He held up a small plastic tube of pills and smiled.

"Does it work?"

"We would hardly be selling it, sir, if we didn't believe in it."

His drugstore — called a chemist's shop in Britain — was one of a chain, a big chain with a long and respected reputation.

In a voice softened by years of discreet inquiry into the aches and pains of men, women and children, he asked ever so gently:

"Are you, sir, as they say, hanged over?"

"Let us say that I was chewed a bit by Old Rover last night."

"Beg pardon?" He looked puzzled.

"Yes, I'm not feeling very well, but we say hung over, not hanged over."

"Really, sir?" he chuckled. "Comes to the same thing though, what?"

"What what?"

"Hanged over and hung over," he answered, and then down to business.

"The pills are three and six" --three shillings six pence or 49 cents, for four.

On the side of the little tube, in black letters, the makers say the pellets are for hangovers.

Orange in color, the pills are about the size of an average sized man's little fingernail.

Back home this consumer consumed not one but two, and waited.

In about 15 minutes the end of the world seemed less imminent, the little man with the hammer stopped his violent pounding inside the skull, the brown furry taste in the mouth tasted less brown and furry and the cat moving across the carpet ceased stomping.

Britain's newly advertised hangover cure is the brain child of Howard L. Rice. He says he has clinically tested it on 1,000 men and women all suffering from hangovers.

The Dunlop Committee on Safety of Drugs, a standing committee, tested it for any possible side effects. The committee reported it found none, and passed the pills for sale and consumption.

Said Rice: "It is a simple fact that something gets lost when you drink. So, what we've tried to do is to replace what has been lost."

He said the lost things are vitamins in the B group.

"We've put them in the pills," said Rice.

Families Feel Pinch of Higher Food Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Across the country, families are feeling the pinch of higher food prices. They spent an average of nearly $1,025 a family on food in 1965 — a record.

This year the total may run 6 to 7 per cent higher.

The latest increase is in the price of refined sugar — at a time when the price of raw sugar on the world market has dropped to the lowest in 25 years and there is a worldwide surplus of 20 million tons — about twice the annual U.S. consumption.

The U.S. sugar quota system intertwined with foreign policy has helped create an artificial shortage of refined sugar in the United States and guaranteed foreign producers twice the price they can get in the rest of the world — with the American housewife footing the bill.

But coffee — without sugar — is getting cheaper.

Three large companies have cut their wholesale coffee prices.

Potato prices are headed higher — but nowhere nearly as high as a year ago.

Tomato products also may cost more in the months ahead. The tomato crop was cut by bad weather.

Pork chops are down 30 cents a pound in a New York area supermarket chain this weekend. Smoked hams are down 3 to 11 cents on the West Coast and bacon 3 to 4 cents.

Canned pineapple and pineapple juice and fruit cocktail may be featured as specials at many markets.

Sherman Grant

So many people have complimented us on our new Shell Station we are just completing on East Malone Avenue and Ingram Road, that we thought we should thank them publicly. We hope if you are one who has not taken the time to look it over carefully, you will cast a critical eye in our direction the next time you are by. We think you will find it refreshing and quite different.

You see, we are in disagreement with those who think a station - especially, a Shell Station - is just another eye-sore. We are in disagreement with those too, who believe they should look alike or be just another porcelain monster. We want our stations to have personality. We believe that everyone we build should be better than the last one, and different from the last one. They should be a credit to the community in which they are built.

We invite you to stop in - we will be open soon - and look this "little jewel" over. You will find Chestnut paneling, Targonal and marble floors, flocked wall paper, piped-in music, new-type island lights, split rail fences, air conditioning, stained glass, and many other things that people just don't expect in a service station. We think the people in our area deserve the best, and as long as we are around, we will be right there trying to fulfill this obligation.

Thank you again for the phone calls, nice letters and personally-made compliments. We like 'em, but it's really no better than the people of Sikeston deserve. Watch for an opening date. Won't be long!

Very truly yours

Yanks "Ain't What They Used To Be"

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Now Ralph Houk knows how Frank Chance felt 53 years ago.

Chance, a Hall of Famer who starred at first base for the Chicago Cubs, managed the New York Yankees in 1913 when they were in last place on the next-to-last day of the season.

Today, Houk's Yankees occupy the American League cellar for the first time in September since that day in 1913.

Houk undoubtedly hopes things turn out as well for him as they did for Chance — the 1913 Yankees came on to win on the final day and finish seventh in an eight-team league.

New York hasn't finished last since 1912.

The Yankees, winners of 29 pennants and 20 World Series, plunged into the basement Wednesday night by losing 3-2 to league-leading Baltimore while Boston was edging Cleveland 5-4 and Kansas City was beating California 6-3.

The loss left the Yankees 28½ games off the pace, a game back of Kansas City and one-half game behind ninth-place Boston.

In other AL games Wednesday, Minnesota nipped Chicago 6-4 and Detroit downed Washington 4-0.

Atlanta trounced Pittsburgh 8-3, St. Louis nipped Houston 6-5 and San Francisco edged Los Angeles 3-2 in 12 innings in the only National League action.

As last-place teams have a habit of doing, the Yankees lost their game the hard way — Baltimore scoring the winning run in the eighth inning without getting a hit.

The Orioles loaded the bases on a walk, a sacrifice-fielder choice on which pitcher Mel Stottlemyre failed to throw out the man at second and an intentional walk to Frank Robinson.

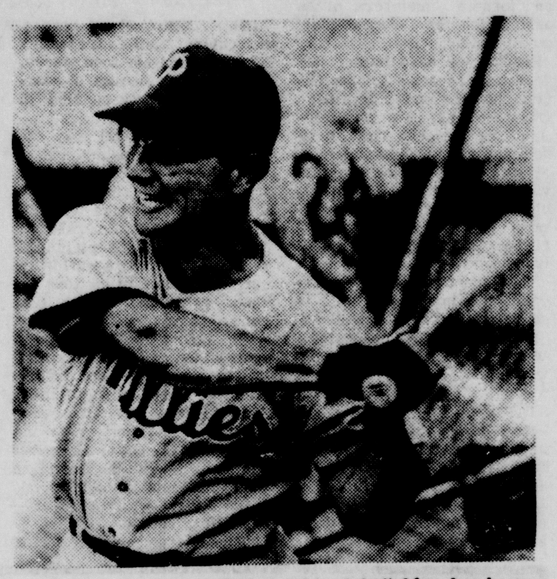
Brooks Robinson then hit a hard grounder to third base which Clete Boyer bobbled and then attempted to get a double play instead of going to the plate for a force out.

Boston erupted for four runs in the sixth in beating Cleveland. Jose Tartabull's bases-loaded single brought home the first run and broke a 1-1 tie.

Danny Cater was the big man in Kansas City's victory. He doubled home a run in the first and singled home a pair in the seventh. Jack Aker picked up his 24th save for the Athletics, stopping a threat after California loaded the bases in the sixth.

Earl Wilson gained his ninth straight victory and 18th of the season against nine losses for Detroit by limiting Washington to three hits. The Tigers got three of their runs in the opening inning when the first four batters got hits.

Minnesota came up with four runs in the eighth to beat Chicago. Rich Rollins singled home the tying run, and the winning run scored when outfielder Ken Berry scooped up the ball hit by Rollins and threw it into the Chicago dugout.



JOHNNY CALLISON, Philadelphia rightfielder, has been on a batting rampage since donning glasses recently. Callison had been in a slump before his visit to the eye doctor.

Cards Recall 10 Players

The Cardinals have recalled ten players who have been out on option to their Tulsa, Oklahoma, farm team of the Pacific Coast League, it was announced by General Manager Bob Howsam.

None of the recalled players are to report at this time, Howsam said, since the Tulsa Club is engaged in its playoffs.

The recalled players are Outfielders Al Johnson, Walter Williams and Bobby Tolan, First Baseman George Kernek, Catcher Dave Pavlesic, and Pitchers Jim Cosman, Dennis Aust, Harold Gilson, Tracy Stallard and Art Mahaffey.

The three outfielders recalled are all among the top hitters in the league, and all well over the .300 mark. According to latest figures, Johnson, a 23-year-old from Detroit, is batting .355; Tolan, a 20-year-old Los Angeles resident, is at .333, and Williams, who is 22 and lives in San Francisco, is hitting .326.

Pavlesic, a 25- year - old catcher who also has played the infield, is batting .262, while Kernek, a 26 - year - old Oklahoman, is at .270.

Records of the pitchers involved are: Cosman, nine victories and two defeats, Aust 6-3, Gilson, 1-2, Stallard 2-2 and Mahaffey 3-4. Aust, Mahaffey and Stallard all saw service with the Cardinals this season.

Cosman and Gilson, both of whom were with the Cardinals in spring training, are considered fine prospects. Cosman is six feet, four inches tall and lives at Nashville, Tennessee, while Gilson, an inch taller, is from Berkeley, California.

One of the features of coming Cardinal games will be the gala fireworks display following next Tuesday night's game at Busch Memorial Stadium against the Cincinnati Reds. The Reds also will be in St. Louis next Wednesday night. Good seats are available at all prices.

matter of fact

In the last few years a need has been felt to somehow distinguish between the types of books which are conceived only as a piece of saleable merchandise and those which are undertaken for some artistic purpose. The term "nonbook" was coined recently to describe the first type of book.

PITCHING - Earl Wilson, Tigers, pitched a three-hitter for his ninth straight victory, bringing his record to 18-9, as Detroit beat Washington 4-0.

BATTING- Frank Johnson, Giants, singled in the 12th inning driving in Willie Mays all the way from first as the Giants beat Los Angeles 3-2 and moved to a half-game behind the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

To the hunter or to the gourmet, it will be interesting to know that in the second half of the 20th century one game bird was raised for every 38 domestic turkeys produced, one for every 16 ducks, one for every 1.5 geese, and one for every 1.3 guineas. In North America the term "game bird" includes quail, pheasant, grouse and partridge, ducks, geese and swans, woodcock, snipe and plover.

Giants Take 3-2 Twelve Inning Victory From Los Angeles Dodgers

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Wizard of Candlestick Park did it again.

Just one day after he had extracted a three-hit performance from the previously lifeless Ray Sadecki, San Francisco Manager Herman Franks played presto-chango, now you see him, now you don't, with his line-up Wednesday and, lo and behold, the Giants beat the Dodgers again, 3-2 in 12 innings.

The hidden player trick involved one Frank Johnson about whom just a bit more than nothing was known. And for good reason. Until Tuesday, Johnson was spending his days at the Giants' Pacific Coast League farm club in Phoenix, where he hit .315.

With the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the ninth and a chance to climb to within half a game of the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates at stake, Houdini Franks decided it was the perfect time to test Johnson and he put him out in left field.

Johnson didn't discredit himself out there, but as the game went into the 10th inning, he came to the plate with Willie Mays on first and two out. If Franks had not juggled the line-up, the batter would have been Jim Hart, who had produced the Giants' only runs to that point with a two-run homer back in the first inning. Johnson struck out and Franks must have wondered what happened to his magic wand.

The game sailed along into the 12th, entertaining the record Dodger Stadium crowd of 54,933 no end, when history repeated itself in record time. With two out, Dodger reliever Joe Moeller missed on three close pitches to Mays and decided to throw the fourth one wide purposely rather than let Willie have a whack at an easy one.

Up came Johnson, again and he singled to right-center and then left the wizardry to Mays, who somehow made it all the way home, scoring when Dodger catcher John Roseboro dropped the ball.

The Dodgers threatened in their half of the 12th, loading the bases, as they had in the 11th. But, as he had the inning before, Frank Linzy personally took care of the third out. In the 11th, Linzy struck out Jim Barbieri and in the 12th, he got Jim Lefebvre to bounce one back to the mound and outraced him to the bag.

The Dodgers are now in third, 1½ games behind Pittsburgh.

Bill Woodward's bases-loaded single in the fifth drove in two runs and broke a 3-3 tie sending Atlanta to its 8-3 victory over the Bucs. It was Pittsburgh's third straight defeat and the Braves' eighth triumph in nine starts.

Tim McCarver hit a two-run homer in the eighth off Mike Cuellar for the St. Louis decision. Dave Giusti had held the Cards hitless through five innings. Mike Shannon homered in the seventh for 6-5 victory.

Four Major League Teams Get Green Light

NEW YORK (AP)—Four major league teams had the green light today to print tickets for the World Series, which, barring a playoff, will open in a National League city Wednesday, Oct. 5.

Commissioner William Eckert said Wednesday he had authorized American League-leading Baltimore and the three top National League contenders—Pittsburgh, Los Angeles and San Francisco—to print 1966 Series tickets.

In the past, when teams located as close together as Baltimore and Pittsburgh played in the Series, there were no open dates.

However, Eckert said this year there will be a day off for travel "for the convenience of the players, as well as the fans, regardless of the teams or the cities involved."

He also said that in the event of a playoff there would be an open date between the end of the playoff and the start of the Series.

In case of a best-of-3 playoff, it would start the day after the regular season ends.

The series would move to the American League city Saturday, Oct. 8, Sunday, Oct. 9 and Monday, Oct. 10, if necessary. If it goes beyond that point, play would resume in the National League city Wednesday, Oct. 12, and continue Thursday, Oct. 13, if necessary.

Pirates Drop 3rd Game

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

PITTSBURGH AP - "There's nothing wrong with Willie, he's only human," says Pirate Manager Harry Walker of Willie Stargell, currently fighting a batting slump.

Stargell's bat has been silent since last Thursday and Pittsburgh is beginning to feel it. They dropped their third straight Wednesday night as Atlanta romped over the Pirates 8-3. The setback cut their National League lead to a half-game over San Francisco, which edged Los Angeles 3-2 in 12 innings.

Stargell, the second half of Pittsburgh's one-two punch with Roberto Clemente, has watched his batting average skid from .330 last week to .313 but he's optimistic.

"It's a funny thing, sometimes you go with a lot of hits and sometimes you don't," said the slugger in the Pirate dressing room after a one-for-four performance.

"Things have got to get better though, they've got to," Stargell said.

He went into Wednesday night's game with one hit in the last 26 times at bat. After flying out to Mack Jones in the first inning, he ended a 0-for-14 famine with a single to center. But in the fifth, with Clemente on second with a double, he was thrown out by Dennis Menke for the third out. Pitcher Ken Johnson got him on strikes in the eighth.

With 20 games to go, Stargell must get his form back if the Pirates are to win the pennant -and Walker knows it, but he's just as hopeful as Stargell.

"With so many games to play, you can't stay hot all the time," Walker says. "Once you get a little disturbed, you begin to fight it. It just takes a little while to get out of it."

Stock Cars Put Racing Show on the Road

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Sports Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WATKINS GLEN, N. Y.— (NEA)—Ten years ago, the sight of 40 ponderous Grand National stock cars touring the beautiful 2.3-mile road course here would have sickened sports car fans.

"I never thought I'd see the day," said John Loving, a Porsche owner and novice driver from Washington, D.C., "when road racing would let oval track farm boys with their hot Detroit barges come to Watkins Glen."

Today stock car road racing is the fastest growing type of auto racing in the country and people like John Loving are avid supporters.

Its success has virtually wiped out all the prejudices that once existed between the two breeds.

"All the stock and Indy car drivers do is turn left and gun it," the sports car people would say, turning up their noses. "Any fool can do that."

The southern-dominated world of stock car racing and midwestern-oriented sprint and midget car racing circuits, meanwhile, delighted in calling sports car people "strokers and brokers"—stroker meaning slow and broker meaning poor little rich boy.

Stock car racing on road tracks met with mixed reaction nationally when it was introduced six years ago. But the idea was an immediate hit at Riverside in California.

Three years ago, Trenton, N.J., Speedway promoter Sam Nunis brought in Jimmy Clark and Dan Gurney, who were gods to sports car lovers, to drive Indy cars at Trenton.

"The five or six thousand sports car fans who showed up to see Clark and Gurney were sold when they saw our kind of racing live," Nunis said.

Final prejudices were struck down in nearly all sections of the country when Grand Prix heroes Clark and Graham Hill won the Indianapolis 500 back-to-back and oval track darlings like A. J. Foyt began to show well in road races abroad.

"Now," said National Association of Stock Car Racing (NASCAR) president Bill France, "it's a proven thing that a good driver is a good driver no matter what kind of track he's on."

The "integration" of auto racing, however, has not solved all of the sport's immense organizational problems.

From some corners of racing come pleas for a czar to oversee all of racing—everything from drags to go-karting.

Right now, the closest thing to a czar in racing is Bill France. He is the man who organized NASCAR and brought order and dignity to stock car racing. But France and others in the administrative end of racing see no need for an overall director.

After a race at Trenton recently, Nunis sat back and pondered the question of a racing czar.

"We've already got a czar —the people who pay their money. They demand good competition and action and, in automobile racing, that's what they get."

Missouri 8th On Defense Contract List

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — California, New York and Texas — in that order — got the biggest slices of defense prime contract spending in fiscal 1966, Pentagon figures showed today.

California, heavy in aerospace and electronics industries, received $5.8 billion in prime contract awards — 18.3 per cent of the $35.7 billion spent for military goods or services in the fiscal year that ended last June 30.

New York's share in defense spending totaled $2.8 billion and Texas followed with $2.29 billion.

The Texas total was up $850 million over the previous year, due mainly to contract awards for helicopters ticketed for Viet Nam. California's total climbed an estimated $650 million and New York contracts rose by $570 million.

All 50 states and the District of Columbia got a chunk of the money put out by the Defense Department — biggest spender of federal funds — but aside from the top three only seven other states received over $1 billion in contracts.

These were Connecticut with $2.05 billion, Pennsylvania with $1.67 billion, Ohio $1.59 billion, Massachusetts $1.33 billion, Missouri $1.11 billion, New Jersey $1.09 billion and Indiana $1.07 billion.

Overall, prime contract awards surged upward by nearly $10 billion from fiscal 1965's $26.63 billion. Civil functions of the Army Corps of Engineers for flood control and rivers and harbors work were not included in the tabulation.

The Pentagon said the breakdown provides no direct indication of where the actual production work was done. For the most part, it said, state figures indicate where a product was finally processed and assembled or where construction or service was performed.

A spokesman said the Pentagon is compiling a list of the companies who received the biggest dollar amounts in contract awards.

Kansas received contracts in fiscal 1966 totaling $312.6 million, Nebraska $80.5 million; Oklahoma $158.5 million; Arkansas $95.7 million; Colorado $255.9 million; Iowa $247.6 million, and Illinois $919.8 million.

All 5 State Mental Hospitals Accredited

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - The office of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes reports that for the first time in history all five Missouri mental hospitals have received accreditation.

One year's accreditation was given to the Fulton, Nevada and Farmington hospitals and three-year accreditation to the St. Louis and St. Joseph hospitals. Only the St. Louis institution has been accredited in the past.

The accreditations are conditional, said Dr. George A. Ulett director of the division. The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals said a number of factors must be corrected before full approval can be given.

Intruder Turns Chef

LANSING, Mich. AP — Lansing police can't blame hunger as the motive for a break-in in a downtown restaurant.

They said that whoever broke into the eating place brought his own chicken and cooked it over a coffee-maker heating unit. The intruder did take a few french fried onion rings, they added.

Know Your Newspaper Better

How Do We Prevent Errors?

As a reader, perhaps you think we always make mistakes. At times, of course we do . . . and no one is more distressed about a misspelled name than the editor himself.

We Check...and Often Double-Check

whenever a name or any part of a news report is in question. Even such a common name as Smith (Smyth, Smythe). And when it comes to Mary Czolgosz, our effort for accuracy is "all out." Why, then, do errors occur?

So Few Mistakes— Almost a Miracle!

In setting just one column of type for your newspaper, the chances for error are approximately 2,000,000! No wonder there are a few mistakes . . . isn't it surprising how few?

Shooting Husband Is Against Law

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A housewife who accused her husband of beating her asked a city judge for permission to shoot him.

"Is it against the law for me to get a shotgun and shoot him between the eyes?" asked the woman, testifying Tuesday in city court.

"It's against the law," replied Judge Andrew J. Doyle, "but it seems to be the accepted custom these days for women to shoot their husbands."

Doyle dismissed an assault charge against the husband, who claimed he whipped his wife in self-defense after she threw rocks at him.

At least 15 chemical elements are essential to the human body.

THE PRAYER

For Today From The Upper Room

Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men. (II Corinthians 3:2)
PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, we pray for Thy mighty power so that we can be able to live here for Thee and to be a living epistle Christ known and read of all men. In His spirit we pray, as He taught us, "Our Father who art in heaven . . . . . .Amen."

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: You hear a lot these days about overbearing mothers. How about married daughters who think they are entitled to mother's services and all the privileges of the home they left?

When our daughter was first married she had a habit of helping herself to our Christmas ornaments, linens, pots and pans -- whatever she wanted.

Finally I told her I wouldn't touch her things if she agreed not to touch mine. She snapped, "I'm shocked that you would be so petty," and added, "After all, I used to live here."

Yesterday my neighbor came over in a state of shock. Her daughter had telephoned to say she was leaving her children with "Gram" while she and her husband took a two week vacation, too, and she'd have to make other arrangements.

Her daughter shouted, "Well, if you don't care about your grandchildren I'll see to it that you aren't bothered with them in the future," and hung up.

Please print this letter and tell mothers what to do. We hate to lose our daughters just because they marry, but we hate to be taken advantage of, too. Where's the line" -- HONEST INQUIRER

Dear Honest: The line is where a mother draws it. Some girls would leave their kids forever and move out the whole house if they could get away with it.

It's a safe bet that the daughter who ran roughshod over her mother when she lived at home will continue to do so after marriage. In such families, the children have trained the parents.

Where there is love, respect and room for honest expression, you will not find the kind of exploitation and emotional blackmail your neighbor is experiencing.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you have against unmarried females anyway? In a recent column (you were addressing yourself to a self-pitying wife) you said marriage had given her "respectability." Are you suggesting that without marriage a woman can't be respectable? Do you believe that all unmarried girls are out catting around?

You also said "Marriage gives a woman security." If married women are so secure why do so many married women work?

Your last line was a gas: "Marriage is not for everyone." You can say that again. Of the 15 married people in this office marriage means nothing to 9 of them. -- MISS 20-20 VISION

Dear Vision: Since your vision is so good I hope you can see something decent in the world. I saw no evidence from your letter. Thanks for writing.

Dean Ann Landers: Yesterday my husband took his mother and me to lunch in a restaurant. I picked up an onion ring with my fingers, which I admit was poor manners, but I did it and I am sorry.

My husband glared at me and said, "Put that down and eat with a knife and fork or I'll move to another table. I'm ashamed to be seen eating with you."

I nearly cried. If this had occurred when the two of us were alone he wouldn't have said anything. Why must he always wait until he has an audience to correct me? -- HUMILATED

Dear H: Because he wants to add to your discomfort.

You violated a rule of etiquette, but he did something worse. He violated a marriage vow -- the one that reads, "To love and to cherish -- till death do us part."

Is alcoholism a disease? How can the alcoholic be treated? Is there a cure? Read the booklet "Alcoholism -- Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 35¢ in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

To the Editor:

On a recent "non-political" trip President Johnson made a speech wherein he called upon the American people to give him a mandate to continue his present policies. This mandate is supposed to be in the form of a Democrat victory in November.

Conversely, a Republican victory in November should advise him that we are tired of wars without victory, higher taxes, runaway inflation, increased crime, moral decay, riots and looting, expanded federal controls, higher federal debt, and a policy that is more concerned with the coddling of criminals than with the protection of law abiding citizens.

To impress him with this dissatisfaction it is essential that we replace "rubber-stamp" Congressmen with men and women with the courage to stand up to their convictions and for the welfare of the state.

Republicans have never had so many valid issues, but it is going to require an all-out effort on the part of every concerned citizen to obtain victory.

It means that we will have to contribute time and money to the support of the candidates who will not rubber stamp the every wish of the "Great Society."

To the Editor:

A bill called the "Demonstration Cities Act" has been passed by the so called rubber stamp" Senate and apparently this matter has been kept very quiet as the general public seems to be quite ignorant of it.

A key portion of the plan in this bill is to put courts, schools, local governments and finances of all cities under the control of a commissar.

And this commissar is Robert C. Weaver, Secretary of Johnson's new Housing and Urban Development Department.

The bill--flagrantly racist--gives Weaver the power to require the cities to actually condemn and tear down houses and destroy whole neighborhoods to bring about integration.

To the Editor:

It would seem that the time has come for candidates for certain public offices to do some careful soul-searching, and thoughful calculation.

For instance: How many of my constituents are members of one or another of the various unions, and what percentage of the total voting strength do they represent? Next, how many of the union members are disenchanted with recent union tactics, or at least with the tactics of some leaders?

And most important of all, how many of my constituents would favor some reasonable controls on union activities?

There is small doubt that the recent airlines strike has had an unfortunate effect on the whole labor-management field. Neither Congress nor the President were willing to "pick up the tab." So while they outfumbled each other, a disastrous settlement was made.

Locally we have had two separate defections in union ranks. First there was the split at McDonnell, then the split in the ranks of the sheet metal workers on the hiring hall demand.

During the recent primary campaign, I asked a friend who is a member of one of the unions, whether or not his union favored a certain candidate. His answer, "I don't know, but I wouldn't vote for him if they did." The "solid union vote" is a political myth.

New Stock Brokers Feel Now Is Good Time to Buy

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP)—The mask of Wall Street seldom reveals its anguish or hope, for a Wall Street broker must abide with outward serenity his personal extremes of black pessimism and glittering optimism.

The vice president of one of the nation's best-known investment advisory houses described a few days ago the members of a group that includes some of the sharpest brains in finance.

"They're a cynical bunch," he said. "They listen and chuckle but they don't swallow anything. They go and check it out."

But under even the most dismal circumstances it isn't difficult to find enthusiasm, for that, too, is basic to selling securities to the country's 21 million stockholders.

As the market slid recently to its lowest in two years, six young registered representatives who had just been certified to sell, gathered over lunch and talked bullishly.

"I'd rather be coming in now than when the market is at the top," said Reginald Johnston, 28, of Boston, who had forsaken a job as industrial salesman to sell securities.

As he spoke the Dow Jones industrial stock average was in a steep decline through 800.

"There are better buying opportunities now," he said. "The big job is to convince people to buy. Perhaps a high market would be more difficult to sell; the investors would be satisfied with their brokers."

A low market "can only work to our advantage," said Blair Purcell, 29, who was a partner in a metropolitan Washington roofing materials company. "It will be difficult at first, but this is an opportunity to buy the right stock."

Michael Mahood, 26, of Houston, Tex., who once enjoyed the steadiness of an engineering job, was bullish too. He was less happy about his personal situation. "I've lost money right now," he said, "and I'm not jumping in myself."

These three young brokers, along with Ronald Swart of Detroit, Patrick Westmoreland of Santa Monica, Calif., and Arthur Kalbhenn of Philadelphia, had just completed a six-month course on investing at the brokerage house of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis.

By now they are back home selling to their first customers. After 10 or 12 months they lose their trainee's salary of $700 a month and go on straight commission, which amounts to $15,000 or $20,000 after five years. Beyond that there is no limit.

More Towns Revert To Standard Time

More Missouri towns have decided to abandon Daylight Saving Time ahead of the customary date of the last Sunday in October.

Sedalia voted to revert to standard time at 2 a.m. Sept. 11. Mayor Ralph Walker pointed to the conflict of time between the schools and industry. Neosho's City Council voted on Tuesday night to return to standard time Sept. 11 and the Seneca council voted likewise.

Joplin will abandon DST Oct. 2.

Kirksville won't join the shift. Its city commission voted to stay with the advance time until Oct. 30.

Abraham Lincoln was offered the job as Washington state's first governor but he declined.

School Bells Silent

SOMEBAR, Calif. AP — Unless a teacher is found, school bells won't ring this year for the 30 children in this Siskiyou County logging hamlet.

The job pays $5,500 a year, and the town pays for lodging in a trailer, water and electricity.

There's another $2,000 if the teacher can drive a school bus.

Time to Move

GATLINBURG, Tenn. AP — Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Bass Jr., of Nashville, didn't savor the idea of being near growling black bears which tore a car seat and ripped a gash in the Bass tent in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

"I think they were hungry," Bass said, as he and his wife headed for a motel.

Family Computer

RICHMOND, Ind. AP — A computer used for the first time by Richmond High School to figure class schedules placed Sherry Pemberton, 16, a junior, in a social science class taught by her father, John.

The computer could have picked 10 other science teachers.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Thursday, Sept. 8, the 251st day of 1966. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1900, Galveston, Tex., and many surrounding towns were damaged by one of the worst hurricanes and floods in U.S. history.

On this date:

In 1636, Harvard College was established.

In 1934, the luxury line Morro Castle burned off the coast of New Jersey with a loss of 134 lives.

In 1935, Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana was assassinated in Baton Rouge, the state capital.

In 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared a limited national emergency.

In 1945, American troops began the formal occupation of Tokyo.

Ten years ago—The Soviet government announced its first minimum wage law would go into effect Jan. 1, 1957.

Five years ago —Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev said he was ready to negotiate with President John F. Kennedy on the Berlin crisis.

One year ago — Hurricane Betsy swept across southeast Florida, lashing the land with rain and winds ranging from 120 to 140 miles an hour.

October Draft Quota Boosted

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon Wednesday announced a draft call of 43,700 men in November and a boost to 49,200 men for October, 3,000 over the originally announced figure.

At the same time, the Defense Department said induction standards will be lowered effective Oct. 1 to get under way Secretary Robert S. McNamara's program for training 40,000 men this year who could not meet previous requirements.

The 3,000-man increase in the October draft call raised the manpower request close to the 53,000 called in May 1953 as the Korean War approached its peak.

Peak calls during the Korean conflict reached 80,000 a month.

All men drafted in October and November will be assigned to the Army.

The Pentagon said it expects a substantially lower draft call in December when Army training operations "will be scheduled to avoid the entrance of new inductees into active duty during the holiday season." This month, 37,300 men are being drafted. The September draft call also had been revised upward by 6,000 men over the figure announced last month.

and nuns of a militant minority opposing the government and the election launched a three-day fast to promote a boycott of the polls. Loudspeakers at a Saigon pagoda proclaimed: "A vote on Sunday will be a vote against Viet Nam."

——While air squadrons carried the main load of allied offensive operations, lessened ground activity was reflected in a reduction of casualties on both sides last week from the week of Aug. 21-27. The U.S. Command announced 74 Americans were killed in combat, 570 wounded and 10 missing or captured. Over all, allied deaths were listed as 187, against 885 enemy dead.

——In Tokyo, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor said he believed the Communists have lost more than 100,000 men from combat, disease and desertion this year. Replacements "By the painfully slow methods of infiltration under air attack must present a very serious problem to the enemy leaders," the retired chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff and former ambassador to Saigon said in a luncheon address. He said, however, more U.S. troops and more air strikes will be needed to bring North Viet Nam to terms.

——U.S. Navy officials said expanding demands of the war have so altered original estimates of U.S. construction programs in Viet Nam that $200 million more will be required to complete projects already on the books.

Widening War

tions of Laos from Thai bases at Takhliv, Korat, Idorn and Ubon. Other bases are at Sattaheep and Khan Kaen.

The Thai and U.S. governments do not acknowledge this, even though Bangkok bar girls and illiterate peasants for miles around the bases know what is going on -- as do the Communists, judging from their broadcasts.

About 27,000 American troops now are in Thailand but only part of the U.S. buildup is advertised.

At Korat, in central Thailand, the 9th Logistics Command openly maintains "pre-positioned stock" in quantities vast enough to arm and equip more than an army division if troops had to be airlifted in quickly.

Sealed warehouses, with interior humidity carefully maintained at 40 per cent, protect the gear from tropical rot.

The war has touched neighboring Cambodia in another way.

American officials insist North Vietnamese and Viet Cong guerrilla units fighting in South Viet Nam operate out of Cambodian refuges.

"I have seen them with my own eyes moving back into Cambodia under attack," a U.S. official said in Saigon.

American field commanders have told newsmen the Chu Pong mountain range stretching across the Viet Nam-Cambodian frontier is a Communist nest -- and a route for Red infiltration.

At least three North Vietnamese regiments fighting in central Viet Nam are said to take orders from what is described as the 119th Division headquarters stationed in Cambodia.

In addition, American officials say there is no doubt the so-called Ho Chi Minh trail from North Viet Nam passes across Cambodian soil, giving Communist troops and supplies a route to battlefields in central and south Viet Nam.

Cambodia's ruler, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, vociferously denies his country is either a staging place or highway for Communist troops.

Sihanouk counter - charges that planes and troops based in South Viet Nam have shot up Cambodian border villages and violated Cambodian soil without provocation.

Whichever account is true, it is obvious war has visited Cambodia.

It also has again touched Laos, as proven by a recent Washington announcement that 30 U.S. military men have been killed in officially secret operations in Laos since 1961.

Most of these men reportedly were pilots, with some killed recently while bombing and straffing the Laos section of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Unconfirmed reports in Saigon say a large part of the U.S. air effort in late July and early August was directed at Laotian sectors of the trail.

Clearly, the circle of conflict in Southeast Asia has widened.

Johnson Hails Moscow Music Festival Victors

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson hailed 13 young American musicians — winners of an international competition in Moscow — for doing more than diplomats to inspire understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union.

He bestowed the title "national treasures" on the winners Wednesday night before a White House audience that included some of the elite of America's world of music and the performing arts. With the Soviet minister counselor, Alexander I. Zinchuk, in a front-row East Room seat, Johnson declared:

"I hope history will record this example of how music has reached across the oceans, the walls and the ideologies that separate us, and found response in the hearts of the Russian people. I hope that it will be followed by other actions in other fields so that other threads of understanding can be strung across the space between us."

Afterwards, mingling at a buffet supper in the state dining room, Zinchuk said Johnson's remarks were "very true."

Five of the winners — three singers, a pianist and a cellist — staged an hour-long concert, receiving ovations from the 350 White House guests and congratulations from the Johnsons and pianist Van Cliburn, winner of the international Tchaikovsky competition when it was inaugurated in 1958.

Cliburn, 34, of Longview, Tex., was cast in a new role — master of ceremonies.

The star of the evening was statuesque soprano Jane Marsh, 24, of Mill Valley, Calif., and New York, who won first prize in the vocal division of the Moscow competition — the first American to receive that honor.

Amid all the emphasis on excellence, the White House stage lighting failed and the President had to make his speech in a darkened ballroom.

There were warm greetings, even kisses and hugs, as the famous visitors went through the presidential receiving line in the Blue Room after the performance.

Bearded author John Steinbeck was one who got hugs and pats from the President.

Mrs. Johnson summed it up as "a beautiful and brilliant evening."

Democrats Tap O'Connor

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Frank D. O'Connor, trying to become New York's first Democratic governor since 1958, faced vote-cutting opposition today from a Liberal party ticket headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.

O'Connor, pledging a "mighty effort" to unseat Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, smashed his way to a first-ballot victory at a nominating convention in Buffalo Wednesday night.

Drawing heavily on votes from upstate New York delegations, O'Connor, 56, president of the New York City Council, hurtled past his only opponent on the convention floor, millionaire businessman Howard Samuels of Canandaigua.

Rockefeller, seeking his third term, is assured of nomination at the Republican convention in Rochester tonight. He seemed certain to benefit by Roosevelt's acceptance late Wednesday of an invitation to run for governor on the Liberal party's ticket.

The Liberals, a splinter group that broke away from the Democratic gubernatorial fold for the first time in its 22-year history, meet in New York tonight to make the nomination formal.

Alex Rose, Liberal party chairman, said the party's own poll, taken about 10 days ago, showed that O'Connor would defeat Gov. Rockefeller and splinter party candidates by about 600,000 votes, despite the Roosevelt candidacy.

His comment came in reply to a newsman's question asking if Roosevelt's candidacy would wreck O'Connor's chances and insure Rockefeller's re-election.

"No," Rose said, adding, "of course (O'Connor) might kick it away in the campaign. But our intention is not to ruin O'Connor or the Democrats. We are fighting for principles."

Roosevelt withdrew two weeks ago as an active campaigner for the Democratic nomination, contending that the party's nomination was boss-controlled. He charged that the nomination had been promised to O'Connor a year ago.

In accepting the Liberals' offer, Roosevelt said he was doing so as "an independent Democrat."

The Liberals usually draw from 250,000 to 350,000 votes, more than enough to make serious inroads in a close fight.

U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, who had been cool toward O'Connor's candidacy and refused to take a public stand in preconvention maneuvering, introduced O'Connor to the nominating convention as "the next governor."

A Democrat has not held the governor's chair since 1958, when Rockefeller defeated W. Averell Harriman.

Autopsy Slated On K.C. Sleeping Sickness Victim

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Results of an autopsy are being awaited by health officials of metropolitan Kansas City to determine the cause of death in the case of a 22-year-old man.

Dr. John R. Philip, director of health for Kansas City, said the death of Larry Howard Swofford of Kansas City was the result of an encephalitis-like illness of unknown cause.

An autopsy was performed Wednesday at the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, Kan., where Swofford died. Findings of the autopsy will be released by the Kansas City Health Department.

Dr. Philip said that any virus disease may cause an encephalitis-like illness, but there are only four types in the U.S. which are carried by mosquitoes.

Swofford, owner of the Gladstone Cement Finishing Co. became ill at his home on Aug. 21 and entered Smithville Community Hospital four days later. He transferred to the KU Medical Center on Aug. 28.

Meanwhile, two victims of viral encephalitis in nearby Johnson County in Kansas were reported making good progress.

Dr. Robert Cavitt, director of the Johnson County Health Department, said one of the victims, an Overland Park, Kan., boy, reported for school last week.

A girl at Shawnee, Kan. is recovering at her grandmother's home in Junction City, Kan., and is making satisfactory progress, Dr. Cavitt said.

Mosquito borne sleeping sickness is not contagious from person to person, the health director said. The disease is contracted from the bite of a female culex mosquito which must have first bitten an infected bird, animal or person, he said.

Cheap Campaign

ANNAPOLIS, Md. AP -- A report shows that one of the candidates for Democratic nomination for governor of Maryland has campaign expenses totaling $4.07.

Andrew J. Easter, who campaigns on the slogan "Christmas for everybody," reported he spent the money on a Santa Claus mask.

(FORT WORTH) - L.F. Fleming of Fort Worth went to a Fleming family reunion last weekend and was particularly amused by an anecdote about his mother, Mrs. Mildred Fleming, and her two brothers.

Some 20 years ago, Mrs. Fleming was in a San Antonio hospital. Her older brothers, Frank and Leonard, both wellstricken in years, went to see her.

They'd been born and reared in the country and they didn't know much about hospitals.

They doddered down a hall, peering into rooms, and saw a ward containing six women patients. One of the, her hair cut almost as short as a man's, was in traction -- legs and arms were trussed and held in place with pulleys.

Frank was shocked.

"Leonard," he whispered to his brother, "did you notice they have men and women in the same ward?"

"Surely not!" said Leonard.

"Well, look," said Frank.

Leonard looked. He drew in his breath. He, too, was shocked.

"I don't like it," said Frank.

"I don't, either," said Leonard.

"I think I'll complain about it," said Frank.

"Aw," said Leonard, "I guess it's all right -- you see they have him tied to the bed, don't you?"

How Athenian Democracy Died

By EDISON E. SHRUM

The 5th century was the great age of Athenian democracy; its age of growth and prosperity. The 4th century, conversely, was the period of its decline and fall.

The real expansion came with the defeat of Persia in 479 B.C. "Greek history for the next forty years," says Wells (Outline of History), "is a story of comparative peace and tranquillity. There were wars," he adds, "but they were not intense wars."

There was, in fact, the first Peloponnesian war, 460-454 B.C. But this, like our first World War, served merely as a stimulant to the untouched homeland. By and large, though, it was a period of peace and economic well-being, money pouring in from a prosperous commerce and from the Delos confederacy defense fund, which alone amounted to about $600,000 a year.

After a period of struggle between the conservative leaders, Cimon and Thucydides, and the liberal leader, Pericles, the latter succeeded in inaugerating the first of the Athenian New Deals. The government was democratized, state funds distributed for immense public works projects, shows, festivals, jobs, etc., until virtually the whole city was subsisting on state pay. The new system, in the words of Plutarch, distributing "plenty through every age and condition." Plutarch adds, however, that these measures also brought a change in the character of the Athenians -- "from sober, thrifty people that maintained themselves by their own labors, to lovers of expense, intemperance, and license."

Plato (Gorgias) likewise mentions this change. He indicates that the system of state payments which Pericles introduced -- "corrupted the Athenians, rendering them idle, cowardly, talkative and avaricious."

These, of course, were hindsights, written after Pericles' death and after the real score was obvious. During Pericles' lifetime he was immensely popular, even though there was evidence he helped bring on the second Pelopennesian war, 431-421 B.C.,; which was far more destructive than the first had been. He held the post of Strategos longer (15 years) than anyone before or after him. His long tenure of office and great popularity made him able to change the entire character of the government. Athens, says Thucydides, "though still in name a democracy, was in fact ruled by her first citizen."

The period between the second and third Peloponnesian wars was that of the demagogues. Aristophanes, in his play, The Knights, has one of these demagogues saying: "I can pilfer and snatch, and supply you with loaves from another mn's batch." And again, when he was being solicited to become a candidate for office, objecting that he could "but barely read-- in a kind of way." And the character supporting his candidacy admitting that: "That does make against ye! --The being able to read in any way."

Plutarch significantly notes that Cleon, one of the most famous of the demagogues of that period -- "got great influence by his exertions to please the old men, who trusted him to find them fees."

The Peace of Nicias (421 B.C.), after a fashion, ended the second Peloponnesian war. In reality, though, it went on as a sort of cold war, fought through subordinate nations and allies.

Two of these allies, Egesta and Leontine, were in Sicily. Syracuse, also on the island of Sicily, was an ally of Sparta. Difficulties arose between Syracuse and Egesta and Leontine, the latter then soliciting the aid of Athens. Their envoys, reaching Athens in 416 B.C., argued that "the Syracusans, having already extinguished one ally of Athens (Leontine), were now hard pressing upon a second (Egesta), and would thus successively subdue them all." All they asked from Athens, said the Egestans, was a naval expedition, and they would pay the cost of that.

The two leading men in Athens at that time were Nicias and Alcibiades. The former, an elderly man of unimpeachable character, opposed the Athenians interfering in the Sicilian affair. Alcibiades, then 34, and extremely popular, was the leader of the war party. His main claim to fame at that time was his extravagance. It was said that his Sophist instructors had taught him "to laugh at common ideas of justice, temperance, holiness and patriotism." Above all, though, he was a master of deceit.

A special investigative commission sent to Egesta was deceived and perhaps even bribed into bringing back an over-optimistic report on the military and economic strength of the Egestans. In addition, Alcibiades, to overcome the slight remaining resistance to the expedition, engineered the appointment of Nicias as commander along with himself and Lamachus.

Nicias, however, was still not sold on the project. He told the Athenians that he thought they ought to take "further counsel" before "hastily plunging, at the instance of aliens, into a dangerous war noway belonging to them." He pointed out that they were "leaving many enemies behind, and that you will bring upon yourselves new enemies from thence to help them." And that what they had with Sparta was not really a peace, but merely a truce "that would endure only so long as your power remains unimpaired; but on your first serious reverse, the enemy (Sparta) will take the opportunity of assailing you." Sicily, he said, was so far away that no conquest of it could be permanent and that it was absurd to venture on so dangerous an expedition that could result in no permanent good.

All of which, by the way, was borne out by subsequent events. Nevertheless, Nicias' advice was ignored and massive preparations made for what was to be the "most splendid armament ever assembled by a Greek state."

Enthusiasm mounted almost to hysteria. Only Socrates, the philosopher, and Meton, the astronomer, who discovered the lunar cycle, still questioned the wisdom of the expedition -- the latter so strongly that he is said to have pretended insanity to avoid going along.

Before the expedition could get under way, a city-wide act of vandalism revealed the strange mental state then prevailing among the Athenians. Defacing of the Hermae, the small heads of the god, Mercury, customarily placed in the vestibules of homes and temples, apparently drove the Athenians over the brink. They suspected everybody of everything, from treason on down.

After the great expeditionary force left, it came to their attention that Alcibiades himself had once, during a drunken escapade, defaced a few images. This in their crazed condition, was sufficient grounds for calling Alcibiades home for prosecution. Instead of coming, Alcibiades deserted to the Spartans, leaving the unenthusiastic Nicias in command of the expedition.

It arrived in Sicily in 415 B.C., exactly 45 years after the outbreak of the first Peloponnesian war. And if, like Thucydides, you believe that events "are very likely, in accordance with human nature, to repeat themselves at some future time, -- if not exactly the same, yet very similar." Then it might be worth your noting that 1962 -- the year we intervened militarily in South Vietnam -- was just 45 years after our entry into the first World War.

'Darshan' Might Help Some U.S. Politicians

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Westerners don't understand it and Indians cannot really explain it, but "darshan" helps make the wheels go around in India.

That being the case, astute Indian politicians pay plenty of attention to this Hindu phenomenon.

Darshan roughly translated means obtaining special merit, favor or godliness by touching, speaking to or merely being near a notable person.

As practiced, it means every Indian has a right to personally meet high-ranking officials and present complaints or grievances.

That's where the politics comes in.

Each day, hundreds of Indian petitioners with a wide assortment of problems gather in the streets and gardens outside the homes of national and state officials, who welcome this exposure to voters.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, though busy with affairs of state, sets aside a period each morning to grant darshan in the garden of her home.

A tent-like "shamiana" is erected to ward off monsoon rain showers. Carpets are laid over the muddy grass, and chairs are put out for the sad and solemn who come.

Mrs. Gandhi's darshan started shortly after 8 a.m. one day, after her personal secretary had screened out obvious cranks and security risks from petitioners standing in the street.

About 25 persons, from babes in arms to aged grandfathers, were waiting as the prime minister came out of the house wearing a brown and green sari. Everyone present jumped to his feet and returned her "namaste" salutation of hands folded before the face in a prayerful attitude.

Mrs. Gandhi can be businesslike to the point of brusqueness and she was this morning as she moved down the line, asking a quick question here, accepting a petition there.

A sad-faced young widow of a soldier killed on the China front in 1962 asked the prime minister to overrule a government official who ordered her evicted from army housing.

School With New System Gets First High School Pupils

By ANGELO NATAL

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — An educational revolution is under way at the Whitby School in this wealthy Fairfield County community—a revolution that so far involves only nine pupils.

These nine, and the 200 high schoolers that eventually will be enrolled in Whitby, are the first in their age group in the United States to be taught under the Montesscri system.

Named after Maria Montessori, the Italian educator who devised the system, the method emphasizes free physical activity and informal and individual instruction.

Whitby is a private, coeducational school administered by Roman Catholic laymen. It has used the Montessori method since it started in 1958 with 18 pupils. There are 200 pupils at the school now, all but the nine high schoolers enrolled in what is equivalent to the elementary level.

Last September, without fanfare, Whitby pushed its program to the high school freshman level when the nine pupils crossed from the lower grades.

"Whitby is more than a school," says John P. Blessington, the school's headmaster, "it is a movement." Whitby "has become a leader in the national reappraisal of the science of learning."

Blessington, 33, says many educational leaders throughout the country encouraged Whitby to move forward into the higher grades.

The plan calls for establishment of a 10th-grade level this fall, bringing the high school enrollment to about 40. The 11th and 12th grades will be added in the next two years, providing a full high school curriculum to about 200 students by 1968.

The Montessori method leaves pupils more or less on their own, although under the guidance of teachers who prepare the educational environment, direct activity and function as authority.

At Whitby, the high school pupil works with a one-month "contract" outlined by the teacher, telling what the pupil is expected to accomplish in a variety of subjects.

It is up to the pupil to work things out for himself. He can neglect chemistry, for example, for a few weeks to concentrate on another subject. But he is expected to finish what has been outlined for him in chemistry by the end of the month.

The study of literature has its "required reading" list as in other high schools but the system is flexible.

One of the high-schoolers at Whitby, going through the library shelves, picked out a novel by Graham Greene, liked it and then read everything he could find by that author.

"He got on a Graham Greene kick, and we let him do that," Blessington said. "We changed his literature 'contract' accordingly. We figured that we'd let him come to grips with one author and then get him going on another."

The curriculum at Whitby is similar to those of other college preparatory schools. What is new is what is called the "subtle yet strong emphasis upon the student's experience level — and honest respect for each pupil's natural pace of working."

The attitude at Whitby is that the focus of education must always be on the individual.

Blessington is confident that the graduates of Whitby will retain more of what they have learned than graduates of other high schools because they will have done more of what they want to do.

"What they want to do" appears to be a major cause of criticism of the Montessori method by those who feel there is a loss of discipline.

Blessington already has experienced what is considered a problem in some other high schools. One of the Whitby high schoolers plays with a small band and has let his hair grow long.

"If I get troubles from parents," Blessington told the boy, "then I'll tell you to cut your hair. But right now I don't care if you trip over it."

Teen-Age Girls Rally Behind No-Sex Pledge

READING, England (AP) — So many teen-age girls want to take a no-sex vow that Reading's League of Honor is in danger of collapse.

"It's all become too big for our small society to handle," said organizer Fred Jackman, 50.

Jackman, who has two teenage daughters, is secretary of the Reading Temperance Society, which founded the league several months ago. Girls were invited to sign a form pledging to renounce sex outside marriage, and encourage other youngsters to do the same.

The pledge became known locally as "the virgins' charter."

Word of its existence spread to other parts of England and to countries overseas. The result, said the worried organizer, was that hundreds of girls wrote to Reading asking for copies of the pledge. It is becoming just too much work for Jackman.

"What we need now," he told a reporter, "is someone interested in the scheme to take over as national secretary. Unpaid, I'm afraid."

LIFE AND REMINISCENCE

Perhaps I am wrong as I do not think that we should live in the past but when memory comes flooding back it is consoling to release some of the past.

My thoughts carry me back to things that occurred before the turn of the century. This article relates to ball playing and concerns two individuals that are still among the living.

When we were boys there was a little park in the town of Blodgett, Mo. At this time this town had all the records as the greatest growers and shippers of watermelons in the world.

History will bear me out in this.

A short ways from our home was a beautiful little park. In this park was a ball diamond and there were three that were bases. I do not know who the organizer of the diamond was but I think that nature helped him.

The game that we played here was called Town Ball. We had a hard rubber ball and it was hard.

First bounce was out and the cross cut.

As I was older and became a school boy, my teacher started us in hard ball so Hal was not in this picture.

My teacher was Robt Buck who later became a county official. He made a catcher of me and after a broken thumb I later played all the positions of the field. I did not want to make this a lengthy article and will try and bring Hal back into the picture.

He is retired and lives in Morley.

Boy did he have it and he lost it at Chaffee, Mo. on Sunday and Labor Day. He was under contract with the Browns and he made them look like a bunch of schoolboys in an exhibition game at Caruthersville prior to his loss.

Showless Joe Jackson was playing third base in this game and he walked out to the mound and told Hal that dam ball is hopping a foul. Hal replied I know that is the reason they can't hit it.

Ask Hal how many of the glass insulators that we broke on the old St. Louis and from Mountain R. Way.

The Pirates are gone but the old dump is still here.

matter of fact

The raven once a universal symbol of dark prophecy, is actually a clever bird of fearless habits which must survive by its wits since it has never been protected by law. The common raven looks like the crow in appearance but is much larger, with a wingspread of four feet. The raven is a hardy bird with an average life span of between 30 and 35 years. Ravens can be tamed when young and learn to imitate words.

Emphysema Eats Holes In Tissue of Lungs

EDITOR'S NOTE — A chronic cough? Short of breath? It may be nothing at all. But it may also be symptoms of early emphysema, a lung disease causing increasing concern among doctors. The following, second in a four-part series on emphysema, tells of some new advances in treatment.

By FRANK CAREY
AP SCIENCE WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) — You have an area equivalent of two tennis courts inside your chest — and health authorities are growing increasingly worried about a lung disease, emphysema, which puts "holes in the tennis courts."

It does its lethal work by attacking tiny, bubble-like air sacs -- numbering 750 million in the tissue of the lungs. If the walls of these air sacs were spread out in a sheet, they'd occupy the area of two tennis courts.

A whisker-thin sheet of tissue sliced lengthwise from an emphysema-ridden lung — that is, an advanced case —looks like a motheaten scarf.

A slice as thick as a piece of steak shows large transparent areas that resemble the remains of a jellyfish tossed up on a beach. They contrast sharply with dense areas of still healthy tissue around them.

Doctors of the U.S. Public Health Service recently formed Chronic Respiratory Diseases Program — CRDP — contend that Emphysema — together with its frequent fellow traveler, chronic bronchitis-- constitute a category of ills "which has been neglected by both official and private medicine largely due to a mixture of misinformation and defeatism."

They grant that no drug or other cure has yet been unearthed for emphysema — and no easy way to reverse the action of its stealthy sidekick, chronic bronchitis. As a result, "both patients and physicians have come to regard them as virtually hopeless."

But, says Dr. Wilfred David, acting chief of the Health Service Division of Chronic Diseases which organized the program, advances have been made by a few investigators and hospitals in treating sufferers -- especially late-stage cases -- and in rehabilitating significant numbers of them.

So the job now, he and other officials say, is to see to it that the message gets around, to demonstrate the value of establishing additional detection and treatment clinics, to make sure doctors everywhere are kept abreast of the latest information; and finally, to combat "the pessimism of all too many practitioners."

But what's this disease all about?

It dates back at least to the ancient Greeks and Romans, medical historians say.

It wasn't until more than 125 years ago that Laennec, the first physician to employ the newly developed stethoscope, noted a form of breathing obstruction that later became known as emphysema.

That's the Greek word for inflation, or blown up. And emphysema means a blown-up lung.

To understand it, think first of a tree placed upside down in your chest with the trunk extending into your throat. That's your "bronchial tree" — the lifeline for your breathing.

The trunk is your windpipe. From it shoot two main branches called bronchi —one going to the right lung, the other to the left.

From each, within the lung, even smaller offshoots branch off, with the smallest, or twigs being called bronchioles.

At the end of each of thousangs of bronchiles is a nest of air sacs called alveoli.

The sponge-like lung expands upon inhalation because these alveoli sop up air instead of water. Moreover, these tiny air sacs are the lungs' real work horses.

They're the end of the line for the air you inhale with every breath and act as exchange depots for life-sustaining oxygen carried in your inhaled breath, and waste carbon dioxide contained in exhaled breath.

Through the membranous walls of the air sacs, oxygen passes into the tiny blood vessels — capillaries — that enmesh the sacs. And carbon dioxide is automatically tapped from the blood vessels.

In emphysema, the walls of the air sacs begin to be eaten away, though the extent and rate differs in individuals.

This results in groups of ruptured air sacs combining to form larger sacs which tend to trap stale air containing carbon dioxide inside the lung. Also, the lung begins to lose its wondrous elasticity, like an old rubber band, and becomes blown up.

Moreover, some of the small airway bronchioles which ordinarily pass expired air up through the bronchial tree collapse inward and become partially blocked to expired airflow.

Upshot is that the swollen lung becomes inefficient in its life-sustaining pumping action; roadblocks form for expired air; the body's tissues become partly starved for oxygen; and noxious carbon dioxide can pile up in the blood. In severe cases, the heart can be affected.

Strangely, inhalation is not obstructed by emphysema's deviltry. However, as more air comes in from outside, and becomes partly trapped, the increased pressure causes larger air traps — called bullae — to form inside the lungs.

Also, if the emphysema patient also has chronic bronchitis, he's in for further trouble.

As Dr. James W. Raleigh, medical director of the National Tuberculosis Association explains it:

Bronchitis involves a thickening of the inner lining of the bronchial tubes, especially the larger ones, so the airway passages are narrowed. Also, there's an oversecretion of mucus, the normal lubricant of the passages, and a clogging of the whiplike, tiny hairs called cilia, which usually act to move unwanted irritants, like dust particles, out of the airways towards the mouth.

Mostly, the airway obstructing action of bronchitis affects outward air flow.

So, that's the anatomical picture of emphysema. What's it look like from the outside, in its effect on the patient?

There may be a chronic cough. Shortness of breath — called dyspnea by the medics — may vary from mild distress upon exertion in early or not extensive cases to severe gasping episodes and cyanosis — a blueing of the lips and other areas from insufficient oxygen — even when the patient is resting. Some patients cough up mucus.

"These people even work hard — breathing — when they're asleep," Dr. Sumner Cohen of Mt. Sinai Hospital, Minneapolis, told the reporter.

How do the patients themselves react?

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., 69, second-ranking member of the Senate from the seniority standpoint, says:

"I've learned to live with it. I think mine is an arrested case — dating from 1958 when it was first diagnosed — and I quit smoking, although I had been real short of breath since about 1955.

"A doctor before that had told me I had asthma, and he told me to quit smoking, but I didn't — and I'd been smoking 1½ t to two packs of cigarettes a day for almost 40 years.

"But when a doctor diagnosed it as emphysema in 1958, he told me it would continue to get worse, and possibly take me away, unless I quit smoking.

"As long as I'm at my desk, I'm okay. But it cuts my breath if I overexert myself.

"Yes, every morning right after I get up, I take those medicines you squirt down your throat —decongestants or bronchodilators as they're called. They make kind of a mist. And I try to blow all the air out of my lungs. I can't get started in the morning until I do that.

"But, during the rest of the day, I don't have any great deal of difficulty."

Says Elizabeth Hayes, 57, Minneapolis, Minn., who had to give up her job as a grocery clerk because of her illness, and is an outpatient at Mt. Sinai Hospital in that city:

"Some days are worse than others. Sometimes, I have all I can do to walk to the bathroom from the bedroom. I go to prepare something to eat, and then I'm too exhausted to eat it.

"Shortness of breath? Sometimes you feel almost as though you're going to suffocate, especially during hot spells, or again when it's very cold. And you get so doggone nervous — and the more nervous you get, the worse you breathe. I try not to panic because when you do, there again your breathing gets worse."

ABOUT OUR SCHOOLS

by LYNN TWITTY

About everybody believes in the public school, like they do in mother love, the American flag and apple pie. Most of us are firmly convinced that education is necessary for individual and common good and for the national welfare. We don't always agree on how to accomplish it. If we need specifics to back this belief in the necessity for more education here they are: the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that there is a crisis in filling such professional and technical jobs as engineers, teachers, nurses, social workers and draftsmen, because we are not educating enough people in these areas. They report that the U. S. employment service has 14,000 to 16,000 unfilled professional openings in every two - week report for the last year. Another area of shortage, although not so acute, is in machinist, machine shop workers, mechanics and repairmen, welders, tool makers, and pattern and model makers. In spite of increased college enrollment, the supply lags far behind the demand.

The BLS predicts that 1.5 million technicians will be needed in 1975. There are now about 875,000. About one - half of those -- 400,000 -- will have to be replaced by 1975 because of death, transfer to other fields, retirement, etc. 650,000 will then be needed to fill new jobs. This means about 85--90,000 technicians should be trained each year.

The following is a quotation from a Report Organization, Structure and Financing of School and Junior Colleges, just completed by the Academy for Educational Development, for the Missouri Governor's Conference on Education: "In the past Missouri did not invest as heavily in her public school system as some other states. Today, adults 25 years of age or older in the state have completed, on the average, only 9.6 years of schooling, or a full year less than the median for the nation.

As indicated earlier in this report, there is a close relationship in our society between an individual's schooling and his potential income and expected employment opportunities. Hence, if permitted to continue, the gap between Missouri's educational standard and that of the country as a whole can be expected to result in lower average earning power of individuals and a lower economic level for the state.

The economy of a state is also closely related to the number of college graduates in its population. In 1960, the number of people in Missouri's population who had completed four or more years of college was only 81 percent of the national average -- further evidence of under - investment in education by the state (in this case in higher education).

The under - investment in education in Missouri is even more striking in an analysis among counties. In 1960 there were 29 counties in Missouri with a median educational level of 8.6 years or lower -- two full years below the United States median and one year below the median for the state.

Although no one can say that low educational attainment necessarily causes low income, there is no doubt that statistics indicate there is a relationship between these two factors. In order to break the intergenerational cycle of low income-low education - low income, we believe the start must be made with the schools."

The Governor's Committee will make the completed report to about 600 Missourians, selected to represent all areas of the state, at a meeting to be held in Columbia, Thursday, September 29th-30th. We assume that the recommendation contained in the report will eventually go to the legislature. Whatever action the legislature takes will probably be dependent upon the reaction of Missouri citizens toward the improvement of our schools, a move which Missouri needs and can well afford.

We believe that school opening last week was the best we have yet experienced. Naturally everything did not run exactly as we desired or as we planned it, but there was a minimum of "foul-up." We attribute this to the very excellent planning which took place during the summer by the administrative staff and especially to that by the faculty, completed in the pre - school orientation workshop. From a standing start to transporting about 2,500 students, full classes for 3,900 students on the first day and to serving over 3,000 noon-time lunches are just a few of the details of getting underway. We believe is no small feat. This is not to say, of course, that there were not some displacements, errors and confusion but we are proud of the school employees who were responsible and for the cooperation of students and their parents.

Now we hope to be able to make some improvements each day toward our Board of Education and faculty's aim of ever better educational services for the school.

State Stepping Up Industrial Safety Inspection

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Missouri's division of industrial inspection is stepping up its program of safety inspection because of a sharp increase in the number of industrial accidents.

George Flexsenhar, division director, said today that in the first six months of this year there were 49,329 industrial accidents, causing 35 deaths and resulting in an estimated cost of $10 million.

Missouri's phenomenal growth as an industrial state has naturally resulted in thousands of additional employes in factories and related activities," Flexsenhar said.

"However, we are rapidly stepping up our program of safety inspections to cope with the problem and plan a complete overhaul of our safety educational program."

Instead of a n annual safety seminar in Jefferson City, he said, there will be quarterly meetings in Kansas City, Springfield, St. Louis, Joplin, St. Joseph and Jefferson City. Safety inspections also will be increased, especially at quarries and construction sites.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

by Walter Millis

POSSIBLE LINES OF SOLUTION

The problems of freedom and liberty in this complex field are not readily resolved; but it would seem that solution would have to be looked for along certain avenues. One rough but very practical solution has been advanced. It would be simply to require that every classification stamp carry a time - limit. Today, once a paper is classified it automatically remains classified for eternity, unless it undergoes a complicated and always difficult process of de-classification. Under this proposal, the paper would automatically cease to be classified at the expiry of the time - limit, unless a similarly complicated and difficult process determined that the stamp should remain. The value of the suggestion is apparent; unfortunately, so is the likelihood that bureaucratic routine would soon overwhelm it and that to continue the classification would become as automatic a process as the original classification is now.

Effective solutions would seem to lie along the lines of, first, a genuine re - examination of the uses and effects of both secrecy and intelligence in the relations of modern peoples. It should be made with a clear understanding that, as has been suggested, the true problem here is not one of catching and punishing spies; it is a problem in the proper formulation and protection of over - all national policy. From such a re - examination it might be possible to proceed to a second step, a much more precise definition of the categories of information for which protection is really essential to the national security, and a separation of all other forms of secrecy from the imperatives of security and the penalties imposed in its name. The present categories of "confidential," "secret," and "top secret" fail in two ways. They make no real distinction between the material involved--some, with experience in these matters, have said that they could see no effective difference in the security important of the "confidential" and "top secret" information they have received; the designation seems largely a matter of administrative convenience, since more cylinder locks, guards, and similar precautions must be used with "top secret" than with "confidential," and these protections can make business impossibly time - consuming. The categories likewise fail in leaving to the administrator no good method of controlling information which for administrative or other reasons ought to be kept confidential, but concerning which the national security significance is minimal or non - existent.

Picking Delayed

No cotton picking is expected in the Sikeston area until the last week in September, approximately three weeks late.

There are no out-of-area labor needs for harvest, the Missouri Employment Service office reports. No labor is available for out-of-area movement. The office is unable to fill orders on hand.

The weather has been ideal for growing crops in the Poplar Bluff area. Labor supply and demand is in balance. There are few applications of qualified persons on file for farm jobs.

The transporting of crews from the Bootheel to the apple harvest in the Lexington-Waverly area was officially in progress Aug. 26. James Whitehorn and a crew of 32 workers left the Kennett area to harvest apples at Peters Orchards at Waverly.

The next crew to depart the Kennett area was expected to leave Tuesday for the Lexington fruit harvest.

General farm work in the Kennett area is seasonally slow with some cotton growers predicting they will have cotton to pick by the middle of September.

Farm labor supply and demand are fairly well in balance in the Cape Girardeau area. Ten male workers, 18 to 55, for cannery work for Wisconsin. The wage rate is $1.32 per hour.

Donald "Ricky" Woods

Woods Boy Critical From Fall

Little improvement has been noted in the condition of Donald "Ricky" Woods, 11, who suffered a brain concussion Monday when he fell from a horse on the Castor Alsup farm south of Miner.

He is in critical condition at the Baptist Hospital in Memphis in an intensive care unit.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Woods, route 2. He is in the sixth grade at Matthews School.

Mrs. Woods reported today that doctors have not decided on surgery, but if a blood clot is found an operation to remove it will be required.

Results of X-rays taken Wednesday are not known but no clot appeared in the first X-rays.

"He recognized us sometimes when he was aroused, and at other times he did not," Mrs. Woods said.

The youth suffered two small skull fractures, numerous bruises, but no broken bones in the fall. One eye has swollen shut, Mrs. Woods said.

He is semi-conscious most of the time and tires easily when awakened.

The injuries resulted when "Old Pete," the horse he was riding became entangled in wire threw the youth. The horse fell and the saddle horn struck the boy on the head.

Gemini Flight All Set

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — America's Gemini 11 astronauts, confident and ready to shatter space records, relaxed today as preparations clicked smoothly toward a doubleheader launch Friday.

Project officials gave a go-ahead to fuel the 90-foot-tall, Gemini-Titan 2 rocket this morning. Except for brief meetings with project officials, Gemini 11 pilots Charles Conrad Jr. and spacewalker-to-be Richard F. Gordon Jr. planned only a casual review of their flight plan while relaxing in crew quarters here.

"We've endeavored to lay this flight plan out so we have a chance of doing everything," Navy Lt. Cmdr. Gordon said, "and we think we've got that chance. I couldn't ask for a better flight."

Goals of their planned 71-hour mission include a rapid rendezvoud with the Agena target satellite on Gemini 11's first orbit using the Agena's main engine to scoot them to a record altitude of 863 miles, flying in formation with the Agena while tied to it by a 100 foot cord, and performing an automatic "hands-off" re-entry.

Gordon, 36, rookie astronaut, plans two ventures outside Gemini 11 —a 107-minute stroll during Gemini 11's second day aloft and a 140-minute "space stand" the third day, when the spaceman pops the upper half of his body outside the spaceship to photograph stars.

Navy Cmdr. Conrad, veteran of the eight-day Gemini 5 flight slightly more than a year ago, and Gordon are to blast off at 10:25 a.m. Friday, 97 minutes after their Atlas-Agena target rocket roars skyward at 8:48 a.m.

Rendezvous on Gemini 11's of the gamut of rendezvous," said Charles W. Mathews, Gemini program manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Manned Spacecraft Center. "In other words, this is about as short as you can do a rendezvous."

"The biggest thing," Conrad said, is not that it's a first-or-big rendezvous but the fact that "we're going to do it on our own. It's the first crack at doing it with our own information and no help from the ground."

Cape, Marshall Women Help Each Other Bear Loss of Missing Girls

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP)—A Cape Girardeau mother of ten and a Marshall, Mo., grandmother have been writing to each other for more than a year since each lost a child, tragically and mysteriously.

"How my heart aches for you because, you see, I know how your heart aches," Mrs. C. O. Reynolds, 61, of Marshall wrote to Mrs. Harry Gill, 39, of Cape Girardeau after little Betsy Gill disappeared July 13, 1965.

Mrs. Reynolds' granddaughter, 9-year-old Denise Clinton, was kidnaped a month earlier during an armed robbery of a motel Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds managed.

"I know that we are of different religions," Mrs. Gill wrote, "but each of us serve the same God and I pray for Denise and Betsy every day." Mrs. Gill is a Roman Catholic, Mrs. Reynolds, a missionary Baptist.

Mrs. Gill and her husband said they still believe their daughter-who would have celebrated her fourth birthday Aug. 21. - is still alive. And Mrs. Reynolds said "I, like Mrs. Gill, still have hopes that my Denise is found alive."

Police in Cape Girardeau, who joined the townspeople to search the Mississippi river front when Betsy disappeared, have expanded their efforts to all 50 states.

Mrs. Gill--who speaks wistfully about her daughter-said she had been called on to make ten identifications.

"But, it's always the same story -- it's never Betsy," she said. Mrs. Gill commends Police Chief Irvin Beard.

"He's more than just a policeman," she said. "He is a real friend and has spent innumerable hours attempting to place the pieces of the puzzle."

Mrs. Gill said she writes to Mrs. Reynolds every two or three months. "She understands, it helps to correspond with her," she said.

Mrs. Reynolds is also grateful she has someone who knows her problem.

"Her letters to me were most encouraging to me," Mrs. Reynolds said.

Viet Cong Steps up Efforts To Wreck Election

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) —Viet Cong terrorists killed at least six persons and injured more than 20 today in scattered attacks aimed at wrecking election machinery and frightening as many as possible of South Viet Nam's five million voters from the polls Sunday.

While U.S. officials sought to determine whether saboteurs or a short circuit might have caused a million-dollar fire that destroyed one American military warehouse and damaged another before dawn, the Viet Cong tried again to block the main shipping channel to Saigon.

A Communist mine exploded harmlessly in the river channel about 40 yards from a U.S. Navy minesweeper.

Highlighting intertwined military and political developments:

——Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, in a roundabout discourse with newsmen, put himself back in the list of possible candidates for the presidency in the creation of a new government due next year. He said in effect he was reconsidering his decision to return to military duty and might run because of the refusal of his first choice, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, to become a candidate. Thieu is chief of state in the present military regime.

——The most savage in a series of operations by Communist agents to sabotage the election Sunday of a 117-member Constituent Assembly was staged at a village southwest of Saigon. A government spokesman said the Communist agents killed a government security agent, his wife and three children.

Registration for General Election Going Slowly

Registration for the Nov. 8 general election has been going slow, City Clerk John Vaughn reported today. The deadline for registration, Oct. 11, is 34 days away.

About 7,000 residents are registered in the city, Vaughn said.

Registration is expected to increase as the election draws nearer.

Registered voters, who have voted in any of the last two primary or general elections need not reregister, Vaughn said.

Anyone who has failed to vote in the past two general elections or the past two primaries must reregister before the deadline, Vaughn said.

Anyone who has moved into the city or anyone who has become 21 since the last election or will be 21 by Nov. 8, must register before the deadline, if they wish to vote, Vaughn added.

To vote in the general election a person must be 21 or older at the date of the election, have lived in the state for one year, in the county for 60 days and in the precinct he will vote 10 days.

If a person moves from one precinct to another after having registered once, he may call in his change of address to the city clerk and will not be required to reregister in person because of the move.

Mrs. Reynolds' granddaughter, 9-year-old Denise Clinton, was kidnaped a month earlier during an armed robbery of a motel Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds managed.

"I know that we are of different religions," Mrs. Gill wrote, "but each of us serve the same God and I pray for Denise and Betsy every day." Mrs. Gill is a Roman Catholic, Mrs. Reynolds, a missionary Baptist.

Mrs. Gill and her husband said they still believe their daughter-who would have celebrated her fourth birthday Aug. 21- - is still alive. And Mrs. Reynolds said "I, like Mrs. Gill, still have hopes that my Denise is found alive."

Police in Cape Girardeau, who joined the townspeople to search the Mississippi river front when Betsy disappeared, have expanded their efforts to all 50 states.

Mrs. Gill--who speaks wistfully about her daughter-said she had been called on to make ten identifications.

"But, it's always the same story -- it's never Betsy," she said. Mrs. Gill commends Police Chief Irvin Beard.

"He's more than just a policeman," she said. "He is a real friend and has spent innumerable hours attempting to place the pieces of the puzzle."

Mrs. Gill said she writes to Mrs. Reynolds every two or three months. "She understands, it helps to correspond with her," she said.

Mrs. Reynolds is also grateful she has someone who knows her problem.

"Her letters to me were most encouraging to me," Mrs. Reynolds said.

Viet Cong Steps up Efforts To Wreck Election

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) —Viet Cong terrorists killed at least six persons and injured more than 20 today in scattered attacks aimed at wrecking election machinery and frightening as many as possible of South Viet Nam's five million voters from the polls Sunday.

While U.S. officials sought to determine whether saboteurs or a short circuit might have caused a million-dollar fire that destroyed one American military warehouse and damaged another before dawn, the Viet Cong tried again to block the main shipping channel to Saigon.

A Communist mine exploded harmlessly in the river channel about 40 yards from a U.S. Navy minesweeper.

Highlighting intertwined military and political developments:

——Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, in a roundabout discourse with newsmen, put himself back in the list of possible candidates for the presidency in the creation of a new government due next year. He said in effect he was reconsidering his decision to return to military duty and might run because of the refusal of his first choice, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, to become a candidate. Thieu is chief of state in the present military regime.

——The most savage in a series of operations by Communist agents to sabotage the election Sunday of a 117-member Constituent Assembly was staged at a village southwest of Saigon. A government spokesman said the Communist agents killed a government security agent, his wife and three children.

Registration for General Election Going Slowly

Registration for the Nov. 8 general election has been going slow, City Clerk John Vaughn reported today. The deadline for registration, Oct. 11, is 34 days away.

About 7,000 residents are registered in the city, Vaughn said.

Registration is expected to increase as the election draws nearer.

Registered voters, who have voted in any of the last two primary or general elections need not reregister, Vaughn said.

Anyone who has failed to vote in the past two general elections or the past two primaries must reregister before the deadline, Vaughn said.

Anyone who has moved into the city or anyone who has become 21 since the last election or will be 21 by Nov. 8, must register before the deadline, if they wish to vote, Vaughn added.

To vote in the general election a person must be 21 or older at the date of the election, have lived in the state for one year, in the county for 60 days and in the precinct he will vote 10 days.

If a person moves from one precinct to another after having registered once, he may call in his change of address to the city clerk and will not be required to reregister in person because of the move.

University President Visits City

Dr. John C. Weaver, Columbia, new president of the University of Missouri, visited Sikeston and other Southeast Missouri towns Wednesday on the first leg of a three-day get acquainted motor tour of the area.

He visited Poplar Bluff, Caruthersville, Hayti, Portageville, Bragg City, New Madrid and Charleston, before arriving in Sikeston.

He has visited towns north of Columbia to get acquainted with the state. The tour of Southeast Missouri is his longest to date.

Mr. and Mrs. Weaver toured a cotton gin in Bragg City Wednesday, saw the Delta Center at Portageville, and briskly visited other towns in the area.

They spent the night in Sikeston, after a get together with townspeople and school officials at the Lee Bowman residence, 4 Bel Air. Several of his Sikeston greeters are members of the University of Missouri Alumni association.

Today the president and his party will tour Cape Girardeau. Then swing north through Fredricktown and Festus.

Traveling with the new president and his wife are: G. H. "Bus" Entsminger, assistant to the president for development of alumni activities; C. Brice Ratchford, vice president in charge of the extension division, and Thomas Richter, public relations assistant.

The new president is the fourteenth man to hold the office. He assumed his new duties Sept. 1. Prior to his acceptance as the university president, Weaver served as vice president for academic affairs, dean of faculties and professor of geography at the Ohio State University in Columbus from 1964-66.

Dr. Weaver and his wife Ruberta Louise, who accompanied him to Sikeston, have two sons, Andrew and Thomas.

DELTA POVERTY AND POLITICS

The Missouri Bootheel's war on poverty has been disrupted by a political fight, and it must be restored as a service to the poor, not to the politicians.

This battle began when J. V. Conran, veteran New Madrid county political leader, decided to return to the public stage with a bang. He had himself elected to fill a county vacancy on the board of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corp. He then led the board in a 14-9 vote to fire the corporation's director, Earl L. Williams. Immediately thereafter, Mr. Conran managed a second meeting, after some of the board members had gone home, and by 9 to 3 chose Marion West, Poplar Bluff cattle farmer and employe of the State Department of Agriculture, to succeed Mr. Williams.

The Kansas City regional office of the Office of Economic Opportunity, which pays the salaries of the Delta corporation's staff, ruled that the West appointment was illegal. It accepted the Williams discharge.

The politics involved almost seems to reach to the gubernatorial level. Mr. Conran is a strong supporter of Gov. Hearnes; Don V. Thomason, OEO regional director, backed the Governor's primary opponent. However, there is little evidence that the Governor had anything to do with initiating the Delta events. J. V. Conran appears to have moved into a leadership gap on his own initiative.

Mr. Conran's critics say the Delta corporation controls a good deal of spending and has helped many hundreds of people, and could be misused as a source of political power. If Mr. Conran's motives are nonpolitical, he'll have to prove it to a skeptical public. The best way to do that is to assist the next Delta corporation board meeting to name a thoroughly independent and capable director, on whom all factions can agree, and to make sure that he enjoys full freedom from political interference. We shall see what we shall see.

Editors Note:

Dear Joe: Post Dispatch Publisher.

You are so afraid of politics getting into the war on poverty. Do you mean the J. V. Conran kind or the Don Thomason kind?

All we can find out about the program is that the paying jobs are pretty heavy with ex-Governor Dalton's and the establishment's released friends.

You pay attention to the future accomplishments under the new regime and we will have a new regime no matter what Mr. Thomason does.

GOOD ADVERTISING HEADLINES

GOOD NEWSPAPER advertising headlines are those that make the quickest, simplest, and most believable impression on the reader. So said a wise advertising man years ago.

He listed the following rules for good advertising headlines:

1. There must be appeal to the right audience.
2. The headlines must be easy to understand and be direct.
3. The headlines must be brief and have a quick message.
4. The headlines must be believable and self-proving.
5. There must be appeal to readers.
6. The headlines must have self-interest to draw the attention of the reader.

Other good elements for headlines, he said, include news, timeliness, testimonials, sex appeal, free, curiosity, and price.

The pages of popular periodicals reverberate with alarming accounts of the awful crush of cars on city streets.

Writers predict that some day the millenium will arrive: Cars will become wedged into every space on the highways and traffic will grind to the final halt.

The only recourse, they say, will be to pour concrete over those cars and start all over again.

But, hasn't anyone noticed how crowded the sidewalks are?

It's so crowded on State Street in Chicago during the noon hour that a pedestrian could retract his legs as if they were landing gear and ride to his destination without touching the sidewalk.

On Fifth Avenue in New York, the crowd picks the destination -- you just avoid being trampled.

It's so crowded on Sepulveda Boulevard in Los Angeles that only your head gets wet when it rains.

This "horde" environment has produced a new breed of man -- Pedestrian Man.

Pedestrain Man has glazed eyes. He seems insensitive to his surroundings.

It is well that he should adapt this way. If he didn't, police would be breaking up fist fights at every downtown street corner.

As it is, pedestrians don't seem to notice the jolt as they bounce off each other. They stride boldy into the packs of people at street corners to be jostled and crushed like the center in a quarterback sneak, only to emerge chatting unconcernedly with their companions.

Even the most nonchalant pedestrian, however, doesn't like the crush. What we really need, he would agree, are four-level sidewalks.

A NEW LOOK AT CENSORSHIP

Jack J. Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, was expected to present a new draft of the movie industry's self-censorship code at an MPAA board meeting in New York on Tuesday (Sept. 6).

THAT OLD WHITE HOUSE HAND, Jack J. Valenti, who once told a dinner audience that he "slept better" because Lyndon B. Johnson was in the White House, is taking his first step towards liberalizing the film industry's self-censorship code. In a memo sent to the nation's major film company presidents, as "a springboard for discussion," Valenti proposes voluntary classification of motion pictures.

Valenti met on Sept. 6 with the board of the Motion Picture Association of America, which he has headed since leaving the President's staff some four months ago, but his confidential memo suggests that considerable discussion is still required to "define the boundaries beyond which responsible filmmakers voluntarily will not go."

Work on a new Motion Picture Code goes back until at least last fall. Valenti is reported to have granted high priority to the revision in the light of two recent exemptions to the restrictions of the 30-year-old present Code. One was for the shirty language in Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The other was for the abortion scene in Alfie.

It was clear that Warner Brothers was going to release a picture on which it had spent $7 1/2 million, seal of approval or no seal, so Valenti's problem with Who's Afraid really was academic. The box office record of the film gives a sort of chancy ex post facto justification for the exemption.

THE SELF-CENSORSHIP imposed by the MPAA Production Code Association has been weakened seriously in the past decade, in part by the release of independently produced films without a Code seal of approval. The antitrust decree of 1950 divorcing producers from theatre ownership took away from the Association a powerful economic weapon for keeping potential Code violators in line.

A classification system of self-censorship would involve identification by the MPAA of films in various categories -- such as "For Mature Adults," and so on. The National Catholic Office for Motion Pictures already classifies films in that fashion. Britain has a similar system.

MAJOR FILM DISTRIBUTORS have long opposed classification. They are fearful, among other things, of laying themselves open to antitrust actions. But Valenti is selling classification by the industry as a way of avoiding uninformed state and local censorship. Only Maryland and the city of Chicago at present have local licensing laws requiring that a film be submitted for approval before showing.

Valenti said to the exhibitors: "If you will cooperate, we can together beat the local know-nothings. But if you don't cooperate, we will sooner or later have to submit to governmental classification."

In this connection it is perhaps significant to report that plans have been announced by the producers of the forthcoming Ulysses -- from the James Joyce novel -- to show it simultaneously in three-day runs in 135 theatres in this country and 15 abroad. The mass quickie release is designed to avoid local censorship, of course.

A LINE OF MODERATION

When a Special White House Assistant for Consumer Affairs was appointed some 18 months ago, numbers of interested people feared -- or hoped as the case might be -- that this would be followed by an "antibusiness" campaign, in which the consumer would be depicted as a helpless innocent, wide open to the ravages of heartless, money-hungry producers, retailers and others concerned with the consumer trades.

That, happily, has not happened. The head of the new agency, Mrs. Esther Peterson, has found a great deal that is good in the way the American consumer is served. She has stressed the need for more aggressive efforts to eliminate true consumer frauds --a goal with which every legitimate businessman is in complete sympathy. And as one authority puts it, the new program she is directing " . . . recognizes that too many people have been assuming too much with respect to the kinds of protection the consumer needs. Consumer education -- to teach the consumer how to look out for herself -- is getting more attention, and business organizations will have a chance to play their part."

If new legislation in the consumer's interest proves to be really needed, it will come into being. But the big point is that a good many people who claim to speak for the consumer have vastly exaggerated that need. It is a simple matter to take some isolated incident of chicanery and blow it up until it appears to be a general practice. It is equally easy to make consumers as a whole seem ignorant and ill-prepared to make their dollars do proper duty -- when, as every producer and retailer knows, the great bulk of them are exceedingly canny buyers who can't be stung twice.

In any event, it is to be hoped the government's consumer policy continues along a line of moderation. The sound business - consumer relationship that exists has much to do with our unequalled living standards.

OFFBEAT CHARACTERS

A funny thing happened on the Throckmortons' vacation this year.

They came back rested and relaxed. How about THAT!

It was simple, really. All they did was decide they wouldn't try for the mileage they had made in the past but concentrate instead on enjoying what they did see.

This deprived them, of course of the chance to see four marvelous, mystifying caves, 176 reptile zoos, 12 rocks that look like elephant heads, 498 roadside hot dog stands, two cliffs off which Indian maidens had jumped when disappointed in love and 23 unannounced detours.

But it did permit them to sleep later each morning, take it easier during the day's travel, indulge in pauses to enjoy special scenic panoramas and historical sites and even to relax a little before they ate their evening meal.

In fact, the Throckmortons insist they actually enjoyed the unusual arrangement. And they are reasonably sure that in time their friends will stop regarding them as some sort of oddballs."

THE CAMEL AGAIN

The bill for creating a Department of Housing and Urban Development at the Cabinet level, in the form in which it has passed the House and is now before the Senate, is a fairly mild sort of proposal. Its principal effect would be to combine certain activities now carried on by existing agencies.

But, it seems very clear, this is intended to be only a start. For, as one of the bill's principal congressional supporters sees it, the new department would ultimately be responsible for "all activities and problems making up the life of the city dweller."

This is quite a mouthful. The city dweller's problems run a wide spectrum indeed -- traffic congestion, air poliution, recreational wants, unemployment, soaring local taxes, and so on and so on. Is the federal government to assume the responsibility of trying to solve them all? If so, we might as well abandon city and other local governments and hand Washington a blank check.

The camel, one remembers, just got his nose into the tent at the beginning -- but before long he filled the whole tent. The current bill looks like an example of that.

H. L. Hunt Says

RESEMBLANCES

Lake Village, Arkansas, where I lived, had one movie theater. During a children's contest to name persons pictured on screen, when the Secretary of Commerce was shown they shouted, "Mr. Hunt!"

Some years later a crowd kept following me around New York's Roosevelt Hotel lobby. Inquiring why, I was told they were trying to catch up with the President of the United States. After his term, Mr. Herbert Hoover and I became good friends. Sometimes someone would greet me as "Chief", an indication they were his close friends.

In 1952 I wanted General MacArthur to win the Presidential nomination; Mr. Hoover wanted Taft. Forty-two hours before the nominating speeches he persuaded Senator Taft to switch the Taft-MacArthur delegates to MacArthur. Four - and - a -half hours later Taft decided to swith AFTER the first ballot. Douglas MacArthur was within 4 1/2 hours of being nominated, would have been elected, and this would be a different world today.

At a February 22 banquet I was seated alongside Senator Byrd, who introduced the speaker, Herbert Hoover. As the banquet and speeches ended, we walked toward the door, Mr. Hoover surrounded by admirers. Several guests rushed to me saying, "Great talk, Chief," or "Wonderful speech, Mr. President." Not wishing to embarrass them, I shook hands warmly.

A waiter at Washington's Carlton Hotel solicitously asked, "What are you having tonight, Mr. Lewis?" Apologizing he said, "Mr. John L. Lewis is usually at this table."

From London to the Middle East no one mistook me for Winston Churchill, but several mentioned our resemblance. None ever admitted that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Churchill looked alike! HLH

Inside Labor

Unions Champion Big Business In 'Socialist' Sweden

Vasteras, Sweden: -- Once, all the King's men in armor fought to drive the invader out of this old silver, copper and iron mining town. That was 900 years ago. But the lore of antiquity has not fuzzed Sweden's sophisticated sense of modernity.

Here, today, they don't try to destroy each other. In the very shadow of the old castle, for example, a very modern publisher, indeed, talking of his purchase of costly experimental presses, said that no newspaper in Sweden had lost a single day because of a strike since 1919. Here, they have peace pacts with the printing craft unions -- running from seven to 10 years.

Only one major newspaper has died -- and that's because it just could not get the circulation. Oddly, it was the Stockholm morning daily owned by the Landsorganisationen i Severige (LO) -- the labor movement itself. But it was not struck out of existence.

I went west here to talk with the top executives of the "ASEA," the General Electric of Sweden, and to go down into the subterranean atom bomb shelters all communities must build. It was during lunch as guest of the town fathers that I got another view of the Swedish labor movement -- supposedly "Socialist."

I dropped my forkful of tiny shrimp souffle when Thjeivar Hedberg, city manager here, said that Vasteras is the world's first city to put its mailmen on a piece rate pay system. I asked if the post office workers union had objected to its members being paid on a per letter delivered basis. "Oh no," said the Stadsdirektor. "They like it." It pays more and we have a fine mail delivery."

Piece work, abhored and fought by American unions, is universal throughout Sweden. Between 85 and 90 per cent of all workers -- including many white collar and technical people -- earn their living under this pay system.

Swedish unions like it -- and five local labor officials here as well as Arne Geijer, the George Meany-Walter Reuther of Sweden have corroborated this --- because it pays better. Swedish industrialists like it because it has given them a productivity increase of from seven to eight and sometimes ten per cent a year.

Furthermore, the big labor organization "LO" and the other four union federations never fight automation. They encourage it. The speedier the induction of labor-saving machinery, the higher the efficiency of plants, the bigger the profit of companies and the quicker the escalating of wages.

Some hours before I got here, it had been truly fantastic to sit in the inner sanctum of Sweden's biggest bank, the Svenska Handelsbanken in Stockholm and hear Tore Browaldh, its president, talk as glowingly of Arne Geijer, the LO (AFL-CIO) president of the Swedish Trade Union Confederation, as the union chiefs talked of the bank, which is the world's 55th largest and strictly capitalist although it seeks the little man's accounts.

"Unions press for rapid change," said he, "of industrial structure. It may sound sensational to you but in Sweden, trade unions state openly that full employment can never imply that a man should stay forever at the same bench in the same factory, in the same place. The union chiefs say that inefficent factories must be closed, the men must be retained and moved to expanding and dynamic industries, maybe in other parts of the country.

"Government, business and trade unions are interested in a high degree of flexibility; they want technological change as fast as it can be introduced. They push for automation. They want the optimum allocation of manpower resources and capital."

Banker Browaldh chuckled as I stared. "There are times," he added, "when the labor leaders criticize the banks for lending money to inefficient businesses.

"We do it," he asserted, "because we occasionally feel that new management might save the business, but the unions chide us. They want big profitable firms so they can share in the pudding."

Both in Vasteras and Stockholm I learned of the LO's (labor) fight to get Swedish business a good tax break. Unlike the AFL-CIO, Sweden's LO does not clamor for higher corporation tax. Though the union's own political organization, the (Social Democratic) Labor Party, has been in power for decades, the corporate tax has been at 40 per cent. In the States it has ranged between 48 and 52 per cent.

Back in 1955, the unions actually fought their own labor prime minister and the Labor Party in power because the labor administration was preparing to cut into industry's tax privileges.

Until then, the corporations had instant depreciation of machinery and equipment. In other words, they bought some big hardware and wrote the entire thing off as an immediate tax deduction in one year. The government wanted to change this. The unions fought on behalf of the employers and there was a compromise which gave business a chance to write off the depreciation at the rate of 60 per cent in the first two years.

Of course, profits are bigger. But so are rates. And there are no poor, no slums, no hungry -- and no Socialism either. This is a more conservative land than England, France, Italy and the U.S. rolled into one.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Debate on the new minimum wage bill was progressing in the senate. A page looked over the assembled senators' picked out the man who for years has been the most consistent champion of labor and whispered in his ear. Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., got up and followed the page out to the long waiting room near the Vice President's office where the public can confer with senators between votes and roll calls.

Awaiting Morse where two registered lobbyists for the AFL-CIO who wanted to express their views on the minimum wage bill. Morse listened carefully. Then he said:

"By the way, I read that editorial in the Portland Labor Paper calling me a strikebreaker. Tell George Meany I know where it came from".

Morse referred to AFL-CIO President Meany's criticism of the senator for introducing a bill permitting the seizure of the airlines by the government in order to end the airline machinists' strike.

"Because you supported me, don't get the idea that you owe me," Morse continued to the labor lobbyists. "Tell Meany that I'll fight for labor when it's right and I'll fight against labor when it's wrong. In the case of the airline strike, the protection of the dollar against inflation was more important than increased wages for labor.

"Name any other senator who has been as staunch a champion of labor when you were right and needed help," Morse continued. "Name any other senator who stood up and made the kind of speech I did against 14-B.

"Don't call me off the floor again," concluded the senator from Oregon, "and tell Meany to go to hell."

EXPLOITING CHILD LABOR?

The senator went back to the debate on the child labor portion of the minimum wage act, to vigorously oppose the AFL-CIO and Sen. Jacob Javits on his amendment prohibiting children under 12 from working on farms, also prohibiting children under 14 from working unless they commute or work with their parents.

"We are dealing primarily with boys and girls who want to work during the vacation period," Morse said. "In most cases where there is a desire on the part of boys and girls to work, the work is good for them. In my state during the strawberry and raspberry picking seasons, even the schools organize the children into groups to go out and pick on a voluntary basis.

"They do this under the supervision of the Sunday school, the YMCA, the YWCA, the Boy Scout and Girl Scout programs.

"What is the effect of the work on these children? Well I am the father of three daughters. Through our church in my home town, the children would get up very early and go down to the center and at 7 o'clock in the morning they would jump on trucks and go out to work under adult supervision.

"Does the senator from New York accuse me of exploiting my daughters? They were beneficiaries of this program. They learned some important things.

"I will tell the senators what will happen if this source of labor is curtailed. The crops will not be picked, and that means they will not be planted.

"If there was an exploitation of these boys and girls I would fight it," concluded the senator from Oregon.

Sen. Morse won his point. The Javits amendment was defeated.

PRIZE FARMER

Out of his farm in Poolesville, Md., Morse does not employ child labor. In fact he employs only one middle - aged man. He does draft Mrs. Morse; and on weekends if you drop by the Morse farm, you will find Mrs. Morse busy writing ear - tag numbers in the herd book while the senator herds his prize red devons into a chute, grabs their ears and reads off the numbers tattooed on the inside.

At the opening of the Gaithersburg, Md., Fair the other day, the senator from Oregon turned up with his exhibits. He was accompanied by only one man. Together they placed 83 hens and roosters in cages, tied up 28 red devon bulls, heifers and cows in the cattle shed.

When the fair was over, the senator had collected 77 prizes on his 83 chickens, 22 prizes on his 28 head of cattle. More important, he had a wonderful time.

CRANK PHONE CALLS

A bill to outlaw crank phone calls to Viet Nam servicemen and their families has been languishing in the House Judiciary Committee for 11 months. Meanwhile, the phone calls continue.

Midnight callers have been especially harassing the mother of Navy Pilot Frederick Palmer, who led the first carrier - based air strike on Haiphong's oil dumps.

U. S. troops in Viet Nam have received so many complaints from home about the nasty phone calls that many now fear to give their names and addresses to newsmen covering the war.

Hal Boyle

LONDON (AP) — "This is," said the man behind the drugstore counter, "the first hangover cure we've ever offered the public."

He held up a small plastic tube of pills and smiled.

"Does it work?"

"We would hardly be selling it, sir, if we didn't believe in it."

His drugstore — called a chemist's shop in Britain — was one of a chain, a big chain with a long and respected reputation.

In a voice softened by years of discreet inquiry into the aches and pains of men, women and children, he asked ever so gently:

"Are you, sir, as they say, hanged over?"

"Let us say that I was chewed a bit by Old Rover last night."

"Beg pardon?" He looked puzzled.

"Yes, I'm not feeling very well, but we say hung over, not hanged over."

"Really, sir?" he chuckled. "Comes to the same thing though, what?"

"What what?"

"Hanged over and hung over," he answered, and then down to business.

"The pills are three and six" --three shillings six pence or 49 cents, for four.

On the side of the little tube, in black letters, the makers say the pellets are for hangovers.

Orange in color, the pills are about the size of an average sized man's little fingernail.

Back home this consumer consumed not one but two, and waited.

In about 15 minutes the end of the world seemed less imminent, the little man with the hammer stopped his violent pounding inside the skull, the brown furry taste in the mouth tasted less brown and furry and the cat moving across the carpet ceased stomping.

Britain's newly advertised hangover cure is the brain child of Howard L. Rice. He says he has clinically tested it on 1,000 men and women all suffering from hangovers.

The Dunlop Committee on Safety of Drugs, a standing committee, tested it for any possible side effects. The committee reported it found none, and passed the pills for sale and consumption.

Said Rice: "It is a simple fact that something gets lost when you drink. So, what we've tried to do is to replace what has been lost."

He said the lost things are vitamins in the B group.

"We've put them in the pills," said Rice.

DELTA POVERTY AND POLITICS

The Missouri Bootheel's war on poverty has been disrupted by a political fight, and it must be restored as a service to the poor, not to the politicians.

This battle began when J. V. Conran, veteran New Madrid county political leader, decided to return to the public stage with a bang. He had himself elected to fill a county vacancy on the board of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corp. He then led the board in a 14-9 vote to fire the corporation's director, Earl L. Williams. Immediately thereafter, Mr. Conran managed a second meeting, after some of the board members had gone home, and by 9 to 3 chose Marion West, Poplar Bluff cattle farmer and employe of the State Department of Agriculture, to succeed Mr. Williams.

The Kansas City regional office of the Office of Economic Opportunity, which pays the salaries of the Delta corporation's staff, ruled that the West appointment was illegal. It accepted the Williams discharge.

The politics involved almost seems to reach to the gubernatorial level. Mr. Conran is a strong supporter of Gov. Hearnes; Don V. Thomason, OEO regional director, backed the Governor's primary opponent. However, there is little evidence that the Governor had anything to do with initiating the Delta events. J. V. Conran appears to have moved into a leadership gap on his own initiative.

Mr. Conran's critics say the Delta corporation controls a good deal of spending and has helped many hundreds of people, and could be misused as a source of political power. If Mr. Conran's motives are nonpolitical, he'll have to prove it to a skeptical public. The best way to do that is to assist the next Delta corporation board meeting to name a thoroughly independent and capable director, on whom all factions can agree, and to make sure that he enjoys full freedom from political interference. We shall see what we shall see.

Editors Note:

Dear Joe: Post Dispatch Publisher.

You are so afraid of politics getting into the war on poverty. Do you mean the J. V. Conran kind or the Don Thomason kind?

All we can find out about the program is that the paying jobs are pretty heavy with ex-Governor Dalton's and the establishment's released friends.

You pay attention to the future accomplishments under the new regime and we will have a new regime no matter what Mr. Thomason does.

GOOD ADVERTISING HEADLINES

GOOD NEWSPAPER advertising headlines are those that make the quickest, simplest, and most believable impression on the reader. So said a wise advertising man years ago.

He listed the following rules for good advertising headlines:

1. There must be appeal to the right audience.
2. The headlines must be easy to understand and be direct.
3. The headlines must be brief and have a quick message.
4. The headlines must be believable and self-proving.
5. There must be appeal to readers.
6. The headlines must have self-interest to draw the attention of the reader.

Other good elements for headlines, he said, include news, timeliness, testimonials, sex appeal, free, curiosity, and price.

The pages of popular periodicals reverberate with alarming accounts of the awful crush of cars on city streets.

Writers predict that some day the millenium will arrive: Cars will become wedged into every space on the highways and traffic will grind to the final halt.

The only recourse, they say, will be to pour concrete over those cars and start all over again.

But, hasn't anyone noticed how crowded the sidewalks are?

It's so crowded on State Street in Chicago during the noon hour that a pedestrian could retract his legs as if they were landing gear and ride to his destination without touching the sidewalk.

On Fifth Avenue in New York, the crowd picks the destination -- you just avoid being trampled.

It's so crowded on Sepulveda Boulevard in Los Angeles that only your head gets wet when it rains.

This "horde" environment has produced a new breed of man -- Pedestrian Man.

Pedestrain Man has glazed eyes. He seems insensitive to his surroundings.

It is well that he should adapt this way. If he didn't, police would be breaking up fist fights at every downtown street corner.

As it is, pedestrians don't seem to notice the jolt as they bounce off each other. They stride boldy into the packs of people at street corners to be jostled and crushed like the center in a quarterback sneak, only to emerge chatting unconcernedly with their companions.

Even the most nonchalant pedestrian, however, doesn't like the crush. What we really need, he would agree, are four-level sidewalks.

A NEW LOOK AT CENSORSHIP

Jack J. Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, was expected to present a new draft of the movie industry's self-censorship code at an MPAA board meeting in New York on Tuesday (Sept. 6).

THAT OLD WHITE HOUSE HAND, Jack J. Valenti, who once told a dinner audience that he "slept better" because Lyndon B. Johnson was in the White House, is taking his first step towards liberalizing the film industry's self-censorship code. In a memo sent to the nation's major film company presidents, as "a springboard for discussion," Valenti proposes voluntary classification of motion pictures.

Valenti met on Sept. 6 with the board of the Motion Picture Association of America, which he has headed since leaving the President's staff some four months ago, but his confidential memo suggests that considerable discussion is still required to "define the boundaries beyond which responsible filmmakers voluntarily will not go."

Work on a new Motion Picture Code goes back until at least last fall. Valenti is reported to have granted high priority to the revision in the light of two recent exemptions to the restrictions of the 30-year-old present Code. One was for the shirty language in Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The other was for the abortion scene in Alfie.

It was clear that Warner Brothers was going to release a picture on which it had spent $7 1/2 million, seal of approval or no seal, so Valenti's problem with Who's Afraid really was academic. The box office record of the film gives a sort of chancy ex post facto justification for the exemption.

THE SELF-CENSORSHIP imposed by the MPAA Production Code Association has been weakened seriously in the past decade, in part by the release of independently produced films without a Code seal of approval. The antitrust decree of 1950 divorcing producers from theatre ownership took away from the Association a powerful economic weapon for keeping potential Code violators in line.

A classification system of self-censorship would involve identification by the MPAA of films in various categories -- such as "For Mature Adults," and so on. The National Catholic Office for Motion Pictures already classifies films in that fashion. Britain has a similar system.

MAJOR FILM DISTRIBUTORS have long opposed classification. They are fearful, among other things, of laying themselves open to antitrust actions. But Valenti is selling classification by the industry as a way of avoiding uninformed state and local censorship. Only Maryland and the city of Chicago at present have local licensing laws requiring that a film be submitted for approval before showing.

Valenti said to the exhibitors: "If you will cooperate, we can together beat the local know-nothings. But if you don't cooperate, we will sooner or later have to submit to governmental classification."

In this connection it is perhaps significant to report that plans have been announced by the producers of the forthcoming Ulysses -- from the James Joyce novel -- to show it simultaneously in three-day runs in 135 theatres in this country and 15 abroad. The mass quickie release is designed to avoid local censorship, of course.

A LINE OF MODERATION

When a Special White House Assistant for Consumer Affairs was appointed some 18 months ago, numbers of interested people feared -- or hoped as the case might be -- that this would be followed by an "antibusiness" campaign, in which the consumer would be depicted as a helpless innocent, wide open to the ravages of heartless, money-hungry producers, retailers and others concerned with the consumer trades.

That, happily, has not happened. The head of the new agency, Mrs. Esther Peterson, has found a great deal that is good in the way the American consumer is served. She has stressed the need for more aggressive efforts to eliminate true consumer frauds --a goal with which every legitimate businessman is in complete sympathy. And as one authority puts it, the new program she is directing " . . . recognizes that too many people have been assuming too much with respect to the kinds of protection the consumer needs. Consumer education -- to teach the consumer how to look out for herself -- is getting more attention, and business organizations will have a chance to play their part."

If new legislation in the consumer's interest proves to be really needed, it will come into being. But the big point is that a good many people who claim to speak for the consumer have vastly exaggerated that need. It is a simple matter to take some isolated incident of chicanery and blow it up until it appears to be a general practice. It is equally easy to make consumers as a whole seem ignorant and ill-prepared to make their dollars do proper duty -- when, as every producer and retailer knows, the great bulk of them are exceedingly canny buyers who can't be stung twice.

In any event, it is to be hoped the government's consumer policy continues along a line of moderation. The sound business - consumer relationship that exists has much to do with our unequalled living standards.

OFFBEAT CHARACTERS

A funny thing happened on the Throckmortons' vacation this year.

They came back rested and relaxed. How about THAT!

It was simple, really. All they did was decide they wouldn't try for the mileage they had made in the past but concentrate instead on enjoying what they did see.

This deprived them, of course of the chance to see four marvelous, mystifying caves, 176 reptile zoos, 12 rocks that look like elephant heads, 498 roadside hot dog stands, two cliffs off which Indian maidens had jumped when disappointed in love and 23 unannounced detours.

But it did permit them to sleep later each morning, take it easier during the day's travel, indulge in pauses to enjoy special scenic panoramas and historical sites and even to relax a little before they ate their evening meal.

In fact, the Throckmortons insist they actually enjoyed the unusual arrangement. And they are reasonably sure that in time their friends will stop regarding them as some sort of oddballs."

THE CAMEL AGAIN

The bill for creating a Department of Housing and Urban Development at the Cabinet level, in the form in which it has passed the House and is now before the Senate, is a fairly mild sort of proposal. Its principal effect would be to combine certain activities now carried on by existing agencies.

But, it seems very clear, this is intended to be only a start. For, as one of the bill's principal congressional supporters sees it, the new department would ultimately be responsible for "all activities and problems making up the life of the city dweller."

This is quite a mouthful. The city dweller's problems run a wide spectrum indeed -- traffic congestion, air pollution, recreational wants, unemployment, soaring local taxes, and so on and so on. Is the federal government to assume the responsibility of trying to solve them all? If so, we might as well abandon city and other local governments and hand Washington a blank check.

The camel, one remembers, just got his nose into the tent at the beginning -- but before long he filled the whole tent. The current bill looks like an example of that.

H. L. Hunt Says

RESEMBLANCES

Lake Village, Arkansas, where I lived, had one movie theater. During a children's contest to name persons pictured on screen, when the Secretary of Commerce was shown they shouted, "Mr. Hunt!"

Some years later a crowd kept following me around New York's Roosevelt Hotel lobby. Inquiring why, I was told they were trying to catch up with the President of the United States. After his term, Mr. Herbert Hoover and I became good friends. Sometimes someone would greet me as "Chief", an indication they were his close friends.

In 1952 I wanted General MacArthur to win the Presidential nomination; Mr. Hoover wanted Taft. Forty-two hours before the nominating speeches he persuaded Senator Taft to switch the Taft-MacArthur delegates to MacArthur. Four - and - a -half hours later Taft decided to swith AFTER the first ballot. Douglas MacArthur was within 4 1/2 hours of being nominated, would have been elected, and this would be a different world today.

At a February 22 banquet I was seated alongside Senator Byrd, who introduced the speaker, Herbert Hoover. As the banquet and speeches ended, we walked toward the door, Mr. Hoover surrounded by admirers. Several guests rushed to me saying, "Great talk, Chief," or "Wonderful speech, Mr. President." Not wishing to embarrass them, I shook hands warmly.

A waiter at Washington's Carlton Hotel solicitously asked, "What are you having tonight, Mr. Lewis?" Apologizing he said, "Mr. John L. Lewis is usually at this table."

From London to the Middle East no one mistook me for Winston Churchill, but several mentioned our resemblance. None ever admitted that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Churchill looked alike! HLH

Unions Champion Big Business In 'Socialist' Sweden

Vasteras, Sweden: -- Once, all the King's men in armor fought to drive the invader out of this old silver, copper and iron mining town. That was 900 years ago. But the lore of antiquity has not fuzzed Sweden's sophisticated sense of modernity.

Here, today, they don't try to destroy each other. In the very shadow of the old castle, for example, a very modern publisher, indeed, talking of his purchase of costly experimental presses, said that no newspaper in Sweden had lost a single day because of a strike since 1919. Here, they have peace pacts with the printing craft unions -- running from seven to 10 years.

Only one major newspaper has died -- and that's because it just could not get the circulation. Oddly, it was the Stockholm morning daily owned by the Landsorganisationen I Severige (LO) -- the labor movement itself. But it was not struck out of existence.

I went west here to talk with the top executives of the "ASEA," the General Electric of Sweden, and to go down into the subterranean atom bomb shelters all communities must build. It was during lunch as guest of the town fathers that I got another view of the Swedish labor movement -- supposedly "Socialist."

I dropped my forkful of tiny shrimp souffle when Thjeivar Hedberg, city manager here, said that Vasteras is the world's first city to put its mailmen on a piece rate pay system. I asked if the post office workers union had objected to its members being paid on a per letter delivered basis. "Oh no," said the Stadsdirektor. "They like it." It pays more and we have a fine mail delivery."

Piece work, abhored and fought by American unions, is universal throughout Sweden. Between 85 and 90 per cent of all workers -- including many white collar and technical people -- earn their living under this pay system.

Swedish unions like it -- and five local labor officials here as well as Arne Geijer, the George Meany-Walter Reuther of Sweden have corroborated this --- because it pays better. Swedish industrialists like it because it has given them a productivity increase of from seven to eight and sometimes ten per cent a year.

Furthermore, the big labor organization "LO" and the other four union federations never fight automation. They encourage it. The speedier the induction of labor-saving machinery, the higher the efficiency of plants, the bigger the profit of companies and the quicker the escalating of wages.

Some hours before I got here, it had been truly fantastic to sit in the inner sanctum of Sweden's biggest bank, the Svenska Handelsbanken in Stockholm and hear Tore Browaldh, its president, talk as glowingly of Arne Geijer, the LO (AFL-CIO) president of the Swedish Trade Union Confederation, as the union chiefs talked of the bank, which is the world's 55th largest and strictly capitalist although it seeks the little man's accounts.

"Unions press for rapid change," said he, "of industrial structure. It may sound sensational to you but in Sweden, trade unions state openly that full employment can never imply that a man should stay forever at the same bench in the same factory, in the same place. The union chiefs say that inefficient factories must be closed, the men must be retained and moved to expanding and dynamic industries, maybe in other parts of the country.

"Government, business and trade unions are interested in a high degree of flexibility; they want technological change as fast as it can be introduced. They push for automation. They want the optimum allocation of manpower resources and capital."

Banker Browaldh chuckled as I stared. "There are times," he added, "when the labor leaders criticize the banks for lending money to inefficient businesses.

"We do it," he asserted, "because we occasionally feel that new management might save the business, but the unions chide us. They want big profitable firms so they can share in the pudding."

Both in Vasteras and Stockholm I learned of the LO's (labor) fight to get Swedish business a good tax break. Unlike the AFL-CIO, Sweden's LO does not clamor for higher corporation tax. Though the union's own political organization, the (Social Democratic) Labor Party, has been in power for decades, the corporate tax has been at 40 per cent. In the States it has ranged between 48 and 52 per cent.

Back in 1955, the unions actually fought their own labor prime minister and the Labor Party in power because the labor administration was preparing to cut into industry's tax privileges.

Until then, the corporations had instant depreciation of machinery and equipment. In other words, they bought some big hardware and wrote the entire thing off as an immediate tax deduction in one year. The government wanted to change this. The unions fought on behalf of the employers and there was a compromise which gave business a chance to write off the depreciation at the rate of 60 per cent in the first two years.

Of course, profits are bigger. But so are rates. And there are no poor, no slums, no hungry -- and no Socialism either. This is a more conservative land than England, France, Italy and the U.S. rolled into one.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Debate on the new minimum wage bill was progressing in the senate. A page looked over the assembled senators' picked out the man who for years has been the most consistent champion of labor and whispered in his ear. Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., got up and followed the page out to the long waiting room near the Vice President's office where the public can confer with senators between votes and roll calls.

Awaiting Morse where two registered lobbyists for the AFL-CIO who wanted to express their views on the minimum wage bill. Morse listened carefully. Then he said:

"By the way, I read that editorial in the Portland Labor Paper calling me a strikebreaker. Tell George Meany I know where it came from".

Morse referred to AFL-CIO President Meany's criticism of the senator for introducing a bill permitting the seizure of the airlines by the government in order to end the airline machinists' strike.

"Because you supported me, don't get the idea that you owe me," Morse continued to the labor lobbyists. "Tell Meany that I'll fight for labor when it's right and I'll fight against labor when it's wrong. In the case of the airline strike, the protection of the dollar against inflation was more important than increased wages for labor.

"Name any other senator who has been as staunch a champion of labor when you were right and needed help," Morse continued. "Name any other senator who stood up and made the kind of speech I did against 14-B.

"Don't call me off the floor again," concluded the senator from Oregon, "and tell Meany to go to hell."

EXPLOITING CHILD LABOR?

The senator went back to the debate on the child labor portion of the minimum wage act, to vigorously oppose the AFL-CIO and Sen. Jacob Javits on his amendment prohibiting children under 12 from working on farms, also prohibiting children under 14 from working unless they commute or work with their parents.

"We are dealing primarily with boys and girls who want to work during the vacation period," Morse said. "In most cases where there is a desire on the part of boys and girls to work, the work is good for them. In my state during the strawberry and raspberry picking seasons, even the schools organize the children into groups to go out and pick on a voluntary basis.

"They do this under the supervision of the Sunday school, the YMCA, the YWCA, the Boy Scout and Girl Scout programs.

"What is the effect of the work on these children? Well I am the father of three daughters. Through our church in my home town, the children would get up very early and go down to the center and at 7 o'clock in the morning they would jump on trucks and go out to work under adult supervision.

"Does the senator from New York accuse me of exploiting my daughters? They were beneficiaries of this program. They learned some important things.

"I will tell the senators what will happen if this source of labor is curtailed. The crops will not be picked, and that means they will not be planted.

"If there was an exploitation of these boys and girls I would fight it," concluded the senator from Oregon.

Sen. Morse won his point. The Javits amendment was defeated.

PRIZE FARMER

Out of his farm in Poolesville, Md., Morse does not employ child labor. In fact he employs only one middle - aged man. He does draft Mrs. Morse; and on weekends if you drop by the Morse farm, you will find Mrs. Morse busy writing ear - tag numbers in the herd book while the senator herds his prize red devons into a chute, grabs their ears and reads off the numbers tattooed on the inside.

At the opening of the Gaithersburg, Md., Fair the other day, the senator from Oregon turned up with his exhibits. He was accompanied by only one man. Together they placed 83 hens and roosters in cages, tied up 28 red devon bulls, heifers and cows in the cattle shed.

When the fair was over, the senator had collected 77 prizes on his 83 chickens, 22 prizes on his 28 head of cattle. More important, he had a wonderful time.

CRANK PHONE CALLS

A bill to outlaw crank phone calls to Viet Nam servicemen and their families has been languishing in the House Judiciary Committee for 11 months. Meanwhile, the phone calls continue.

Midnight callers have been especially harassing the mother of Navy Pilot Frederick Palmer, who led the first carrier - based air strike on Haiphong's oil dumps.

U. S. troops in Viet Nam have received so many complaints from home about the nasty phone calls that many now fear to give their names and addresses to newsmen covering the war.

LONDON (AP) — "This is," said the man behind the drugstore counter, "the first hangover cure we've ever offered the public."

He held up a small plastic tube of pills and smiled.

"Does it work?"

"We would hardly be selling it, sir, if we didn't believe in it."

His drugstore — called a chemist's shop in Britain —was one of a chain, a big chain with a long and respected reputation.

In a voice softened by years of discreet inquiry into the aches and pains of men, women and children, he asked ever so gently:

"Are you, sir, as they say, hanged over?"

"Let us say that I was chewed a bit by Old Rover last night."

"Beg pardon?" He looked puzzled.

"Yes, I'm not feeling very well, but we say hung over, not hanged over."

"Really, sir?" he chuckled. "Comes to the same thing though, what?"

"What what?"

"Hanged over and hung over," he answered, and then down to business.

"The pills are three and six" --three shillings six pence or 49 cents, for four.

On the side of the little tube, in black letters, the makers say the pellets are for hangovers.

Orange in color, the pills are about the size of an average sized man's little fingernail.

Back home this consumer consumed not one but two, and waited.

In about 15 minutes the end of the world seemed less imminent, the little man with the hammer stopped his violent pounding inside the skull, the brown furry taste in the mouth tasted less brown and furry and the cat moving across the carpet ceased stomping.

Britain's newly advertised hangover cure is the brain child of Howard L. Rice. He says he has clinically tested it on 1,000 men and women all suffering from hangovers.

The Dunlop Committee on Safety of Drugs, a standing committee, tested it for any possible side effects. The committee reported it found none, and passed the pills for sale and consumption.

Said Rice: "It is a simple fact that something gets lost when you drink. So, what we've tried to do is to replace what has been lost."

He said the lost things are vitamins in the B group.

"We've put them in the pills," said Rice.

NEW YORK (AP) — Across the country, families are feeling the pinch of higher food prices. They spent an average of nearly $1,025 a family on food in 1965 — a record.

This year the total may run 6 to 7 per cent higher.

The latest increase is in the price of refined sugar — at a time when the price of raw sugar on the world market has dropped to the lowest in 25 years and there is a worldwide surplus of 20 million tons — about twice the annual U.S. consumption.

The U.S. sugar quota system intertwined with foreign policy has helped create an artificial shortage of refined sugar in the United States and guaranteed foreign producers twice the price they can get in the rest of the world — with the American housewife footing the bill.

But coffee — without sugar — is getting cheaper.

Three large companies have cut their wholesale coffee prices.

Potato prices are headed higher — but nowhere nearly as high as a year ago.

Tomato products also may cost more in the months ahead. The tomato crop was cut by bad weather.

Pork chops are down 30 cents a pound in a New York area supermarket chain this weekend. Smoked hams are down 3 to 11 cents on the West Coast and bacon 3 to 4 cents.

Canned pineapple and pineapple juice and fruit cocktail may be featured as specials at many markets.

Mr. and Mrs. William Waltrip

Miss Pamela Ann Mouchett Is Bride Of William Waltrip

A center brass arch flanked by arrangements of white pom poms in brass containers formed the background for the marriage of Miss Pamela Ann Mouchett and William "Bill" Waltrip Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Northside Church of Christ.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lynn Mouchett, 634 East Gladys St., and Waltrip is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Waltrip, 100 Daniel St.

Brass candelabra completed the setting for the double ring ceremony at which Campbell Pullias of Jackson, Miss., officiated.

WEDDING MUSIC

Daniel Malone was the organist and Mrs. JoAnne Fox sang "All For You," "At Dawning," "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer." Malone played the traditional wedding march and recessional.

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Norris Edwards, wore a street-length wedding gown fashioned by her grandmother, Mrs. H. S. Matthews. The dress was styled with a white Alencon lace bodice over white crepe beaded with seed pearls and white pearl drops. The bridal veil was made by Mrs. Rosemarye Harrison and was a flowered pill box with an illusion veil of white tulle. She carried a bouquet of orchids.

The matron of honor carried a bouquet of white pom pons. White rose petals were scattered down the aisle by the flower girl.

Mrs. Mouchett chose a silver grey knit sheath dress and wore a corsage of deep fuschia orchids. The groom's mother wore a pale blue crepe dress with a jacket of matching lace. Her corsage was peach colored Vanda orchids.

RECEPTION

A family reception was held at the home of the bride's mother. The bride's table was covered with a green cloth and centered with a three tiered wedding cake. A five branched silver candelabra holding muted olive green candles appointed one end of the table and a punch bowl the other end. Serving were Mrs. W. D. Agnew, Mrs. Norris Edwards and Mrs. Lincoln Scherer.

Yanks "Ain't What They Used To Be"

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Now Ralph Houk knows how Frank Chance felt 53 years ago.

Chance, a Hall of Famer who starred at first base for the Chicago Cubs, managed the New York Yankees in 1913 when they were in last place on the next-to-last day of the season.

Today, Houk's Yankees occupy the American League cellar for the first time in September since that day in 1913.

Houk undoubtedly hopes things turn out as well for him as they did for Chance — the 1913 Yankees came on to win on the final day and finish seventh in an eight-team league.

New York hasn't finished last since 1912.

The Yankees, winners of 29 pennants and 20 World Series, plunged into the basement Wednesday night by losing 3-2 to league-leading Baltimore while Boston was edging Cleveland 5-4 and Kansas City was beating California 6-3.

The loss left the Yankees 28½ games off the pace, a game back of Kansas City and one-half game behind ninth-place Boston.

In other AL games Wednesday, Minnesota nipped Chicago 6-4 and Detroit downed Washington 4-0.

Atlanta trounced Pittsburgh 8-3, St. Louis nipped Houston 6-5 and San Francisco edged Los Angeles 3-2 in 12 innings in the only National League action.

As last-place teams have a habit of doing, the Yankees lost their game the hard way — Baltimore scoring the winning run in the eighth inning without getting a hit.

The Orioles loaded the bases on a walk, a sacrifice-fielder choice on which pitcher Mel Stottlemyre failed to throw out the man at second and an intentional walk to Frank Robinson.

Brooks Robinson then hit a hard grounder to third base which Clete Boyer bobbled and then attempted to get a double play instead of going to the plate for a force out.

Boston erupted for four runs in the sixth in beating Cleveland. Jose Tartabull's bases-loaded single brought home the first run and broke a 1-1 tie.

Danny Cater was the big man in Kansas City's victory. He doubled home a run in the first and singled home a pair in the seventh. Jack Aker picked up his 24th save for the Athletics, stopping a threat after California loaded the bases in the sixth.

Earl Wilson gained his ninth straight victory and 18th of the season against nine losses for Detroit by limiting Washington to three hits. The Tigers got three of their runs in the opening inning when the first four batters got hits.

Minnesota came up with four runs in the eighth to beat Chicago. Rich Rollins singled home the tying run, and the winning run scored when outfielder Ken Berry scooped up the ball hit by Rollins and threw it into the Chicago dugout.

JOHNNY CALLISON, Philadelphia rightfielder, has been on a batting rampage since donning glasses recently. Callison had been in a slump before his visit to the eye doctor.

Cards Recall 10 Players

The Cardinals have recalled ten players who have been out on option to their Tulsa, Oklahoma, farm team of the Pacific Coast League, it was announced by General Manager Bob Howsam.

None of the recalled players are to report at this time, Howsam said, since the Tulsa Club is engaged in its playoffs.

The recalled players are Outfielders Al Johnson, Walter Williams and Bobby Tolan, First Baseman George Kernek, Catcher Dave Pavlesic, and Pitchers Jim Cosman, Dennis Aust, Harold Gilson, Tracy Stallard and Art Mahaffey.

The three outfielders recalled are all among the top hitters in the league, and all well over the .300 mark. According to latest figures, Johnson, a 23-year-old from Detroit, is batting .355; Tolan, a 20-year-old Los Angeles resident, is at .333, and Williams, who is 22 and lives in San Francisco, is hitting .326.

Pavlesic, a 25- year - old catcher who also has played the infield, is batting .262, while Kernek, a 26 - year - old Oklahoman, is at .270.

Records of the pitchers involved are: Cosman, nine victories and two defeats, Aust 6-3, Gilson, 1-2, Stallard 2-2 and Mahaffey 3-4. Aust, Mahaffey and Stallard all saw service with the Cardinals this season.

Cosman and Gilson, both of whom were with the Cardinals in spring training, are considered fine prospects. Cosman is six feet, four inches tall and lives at Nashville, Tennessee, while Gilson, an inch taller, is from Berkeley, California.

One of the features of coming Cardinal games will be the gala fireworks display following next Tuesday night's game at Busch Memorial Stadium against the Cincinnati Reds. The Reds also will be in St. Louis next Wednesday night. Good seats are available at all prices.

Giants Take 3-2 Twelve Inning Victory From Los Angeles Dodgers

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Wizard of Candlestick Park did it again.

Just one day after he had extracted a three-hit performance from the previously listless Ray Sadecki, San Francisco Manager Herman Franks played presto-chango, now you see him, now you don't, with his line-up Wednesday and, lo and behold, the Giants beat the Dodgers again, 3-2 in 12 innings.

The hidden player trick involved one Frank Johnson about whom just a bit more than nothing was known. And for good reason. Until Tuesday, Johnson was spending his days at the Giants' Pacific Coast League farm club in Phoenix, where he hit .315.

With the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the ninth and a chance to climb to within half a game of the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates at stake, Houdini Franks decided it was the perfect time to test Johnson and he put him out in left field.

Johnson didn't discredit himself out there, but as the game went into the 10th inning, he came to the plate with Willie Mays on first and two out. If Franks had not juggled the line-up, the batter would have been Jim Hart, who had produced the Giants' only runs to that point with a two-run homer back in the first inning. Johnson struck out and Franks must have wondered what happened to his magic wand.

The game sailed along into the 12th, entertaining the record Dodger Stadium crowd of 54,933 no end, when history repeated itself in record time. With two out, Dodger reliever Joe Moeller missed on three close pitches to Mays and decided to throw the fourth one wide purposely rather than let Willie have a whack at an easy one.

Up came Johnson, again and he singled to right-center and then left the wizardry to Mays, who somehow made it all the way home, scoring when Dodger catcher Jonn Roseboro dropped the ball.

The Dodgers threatened in their half of the 12th, loading the bases, as they had in the 11th. But, as he had the inning before, Frank Linzy personally took care of the third out. In the 11th, Linzy struck out Jim Barbieri and in the 12th, he got Jim Lefebvre to bounce one back to the mound and outraced him to the bag.

The Dodgers are now in third, 1½ games behind Pittsburgh.

Bill Woodward's bases-loaded single in the fifth drove in two runs and broke a 3-3 tie sending Atlanta to its 8-3 victory over the Bucs. It was Pittsburgh's third straight defeat and the Braves' eighth triumph in nine starts.

Tim McCarver hit a two-run homer in the eighth off Mike Cuellar for the St. Louis decision. Dave Giusti had held the Cards hitless through five innings. Mike Shannon homered in the seventh for 6-5 victory.

PITCHING - Earl Wilson, Tigers, pitched a three-hitter for his ninth straight victory, bringing his record to 18-9, as Detroit beat Washington 4-0.

BATTING- Frank Johnson, Giants, singled in the 12th inning driving in Willie Mays all the way from first as the Giants beat Los Angeles 3-2 and moved to a half-game behind the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

To the hunter or to the gourmet, it will be interesting to know that in the second half of the 20th century one game bird was raised for every 38 domestic turkeys produced, one for every 16 ducks, one for every 1.5 geese, and one for every 1.3 guineas. In North America the term "game bird" includes quail, pheasant, grouse and partridge, ducks, geese and swans, woodcock, snipe and plover.

Four Major League Teams Get Green Light

NEW YORK (AP)—Four major league teams had the green light today to print tickets for the World Series, which, barring a playoff, will open in a National League city Wednesday, Oct. 5.

Commissioner Wiltiam Eckert said Wednesday he had authorized American League-leading Baltimore and the three top National League contenders—Pittsburgh, Los Angeles and San Francisco—to print 1966 Series tickets.

In the past, when teams located as close together as Baltimore and Pittsburgh played in the Series, there were no open dates.

However, Eckert said this year there will be a day off for travel "for the convenience of the players, as well as the fans, regardless of the teams or the cities involved."

He also said that in the event of a playoff there would be an open date between the end of the playoff and the start of the Series.

In case of a best-of-3 playoff, it would start the day after the regular season ends.

The series would move to the American League city Saturday, Oct. 8, Sunday, Oct. 9 and Monday, Oct. 10, if necessary. If it goes beyond that point, play would resume in the National League city Wednesday, Oct. 12, and continue Thursday, Oct. 13, if necessary.

Pirates Drop 3rd Game

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

PITTSBURGH AP - "There's nothing wrong with Willie, he's only human," says Pirate Manager Harry Walker of Willie Stargell, currently fighting a batting slump.

Stargell's bat has been silent since last Thursday and Pittsburgh is beginning to feel it. They dropped their third straight Wednesday night as Atlanta romped over the Pirates 8-3. The setback cut their National League lead to a half-game over San Francisco, which edged Los Angeles 3-2 in 12 innings.

Stargell, the second half of Pittsburgh's one-two punch with Roberto Clemente, has watched his batting average skid from .330 last week to .313-but he's optimistic.

"It's a funny thing, sometimes you go with a lot of hits and sometimes you don't," said the slugger in the Pirate dressing room after a one-for-four performance.

"Things have got to get better though, they've got to," Stargell said.

He went into Wednesday night's game with one hit in the last 26 times at bat. After flying out to Mack Jones in the first inning, he ended a 0-for-14 famine with a single to center. But in the fifth, with Clemente on second with a double, he was thrown out by Dennis Menke for the third out. Pitcher Ken Johnson got him on strikes in the eighth.

With 20 games to go, Stargell must get his form back if the Pirates are to win the pennant -and Walker knows it, but he's just as hopeful as Stargell.

"With so many games to play, you can't stay hot all the time," Walker says. "Once you get a little disturbed, you begin to fight it. It just takes a little while to get out of it."

Stock Cars Put Racing Show on the Road

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Sports Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WATKINS GLEN, N. Y.— (NEA)—Ten years ago, the sight of 40 ponderous Grand National stock cars touring the beautiful 2.3-mile road course here would have sickened sports car fans.

"I never thought I'd see the day," said John Loving, a Porsche owner and novice driver from Washington, D.C., "when road racing would let oval track farm boys with their hot Detroit barges come to Watkins Glen."

Today stock car road racing is the fastest growing type of auto racing in the country and people like John Loving are avid supporters.

Its success has virtually wiped out all the prejudices that once existed between the two breeds.

"All the stock and Indy car drivers do is turn left and gun it," the sports car people would say, turning up their noses. "Any fool can do that."

The southern-dominated world of stock car racing and midwestern-oriented sprint and midget car racing circuits, meanwhile, delighted in calling sports car people "strokers and brokers"—stroker meaning slow and broker meaning poor little rich boy.

Stock car racing on road tracks met with mixed reaction nationally when it was introduced six years ago. But the idea was an immediate hit at Riverside in California.

Three years ago, Trenton, N.J., Speedway promoter Sam Nunis brought in Jimmy Clark and Dan Gurney, who were gods to sports car lovers, to drive Indy cars at Trenton.

"The five or six thousand sports car fans who showed up to see Clark and Gurney were sold when they saw our kind of racing live," Nunis said.

Final prejudices were struck down in nearly all sections of the country when Grand Prix heroes Clark and Graham Hill won the Indianapolis 500 back-to-back and oval track darlings like A. J. Foyt began to show well in road races abroad.

"Now," said National Association of Stock Car Racing (NASCAR) president Bill France, "it's a proven thing that a good driver is a good driver no matter what kind of track he's on."

The "integration" of auto racing, however, has not solved all of the sport's immense organizational problems.

From some corners of racing come pleas for a czar to oversee all of racing—everything from drags to go-karting.

Right now, the closest thing to a czar in racing is Bill France. He is the man who organized NASCAR and brought order and dignity to stock car racing. But France and others in the administrative end of racing see no need for an overall director.

After a race at Trenton recently, Nunis sat back and pondered the question of a racing czar.

"We've already got a czar —the people who pay their money. They demand good competition and action and, in automobile racing, that's what they get."

Q—Who was the "Good Gray Poet"?

A—Walt Whitman.

Yanks "Ain't What They Used To Be"

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Now Ralph Houk knows how Frank Chance felt 53 years ago.

Chance, a Hall of Famer who starred at first base for the Chicago Cubs, managed the New York Yankees in 1913 when they were in last place on the next-to-last day of the season.

Today, Houk's Yankees occupy the American League cellar for the first time in September since that day in 1913.

Houk undoubtedly hopes things turn out as well for him as they did for Chance — the 1913 Yankees came on to win on the final day and finish seventh in an eight-team league.

New York hasn't finished last since 1912.

The Yankees, winners of 29 pennants and 20 World Series, plunged into the basement Wednesday night by losing 3-2 to league-leading Baltimore while Boston was edging Cleveland 5-4 and Kansas City was beating California 6-3.

The loss left the Yankees 28½ games off the pace, a game back of Kansas City and one-half game behind ninth-place Boston.

In other AL games Wednesday, Minnesota nipped Chicago 6-4 and Detroit downed Washington 4-0.

Atlanta trounced Pittsburgh 8-3, St. Louis nipped Houston 6-5 and San Francisco edged Los Angeles 3-2 in 12 innings in the only National League action.

As last-place teams have a habit of doing, the Yankees lost their game the hard way — Baltimore scoring the winning run in the eighth inning without getting a hit.

The Orioles loaded the bases on a walk, a sacrifice-fielder choice on which pitcher Mel Stottlemyre failed to throw out the man at second and an intentional walk to Frank Robinson.

Brooks Robinson then hit a hard grounder to third base which Clete Boyer bobbled and then attempted to get a double play instead of going to the plate for a force out.

Boston erupted for four runs in the sixth in beating Cleveland. Jose Tartabull's bases-loaded single brought home the first run and broke a 1-1 tie.

Danny Cater was the big man in Kansas City's victory. He doubled home a run in the first and singled home a pair in the seventh. Jack Aker picked up his 24th save for the Athletics, stopping a threat after California loaded the bases in the sixth.

Earl Wilson gained his ninth straight victory and 18th of the season against nine losses for Detroit by limiting Washington to three hits. The Tigers got three of their runs in the opening inning when the first four batters got hits.

Minnesota came up with four runs in the eighth to beat Chicago. Rich Rollins singled home the tying run, and the winning run scored when outfielder Ken Berry scooped up the ball hit by Rollins and threw it into the Chicago dugout.

JOHNNY CALLISON, Philadelphia rightfielder, has been on a batting rampage since donning glasses recently. Callison had been in a slump before his visit to the eye doctor.

Cards Recall 10 Players

The Cardinals have recalled ten players who have been out on option to their Tulsa, Oklahoma, farm team of the Pacific Coast League, it was announced by General Manager Bob Howsam.

None of the recalled players are to report at this time, Howsam said, since the Tulsa Club is engaged in its playoffs.

The recalled players are Outfielders Al Johnson, Walter Williams and Bobby Tolan, First Baseman George Kernek, Catcher Dave Pavlesic, and Pitchers Jim Cosman, Dennis Aust, Harold Gilson, Tracy Stallard and Art Mahaffey.

The three outfielders recalled are all among the top hitters in the league, and all well over the .300 mark. According to latest figures, Johnson, a 23-year-old from Detroit, is batting .355; Tolan, a 20-year-old Los Angeles resident, is at .333, and Williams, who is 22 and lives in San Francisco, is hitting .326.

Pavlesic, a 25- year - old catcher who also has played the infield, is batting .262, while Kernek, a 26 - year - old Oklahoman, is at .270.

Records of the pitchers involved are: Cosman, nine victories and two defeats, Aust 6-3, Gilson, 1-2, Stallard 2-2 and Mahaffey 3-4. Aust, Mahaffey and Stallard all saw service with the Cardinals this season.

Cosman and Gilson, both of whom were with the Cardinals in spring training, are considered fine prospects. Cosman is six feet, four inches tall and lives at Nashville, Tennessee, while Gilson, an inch taller, is from Berkeley, California.

One of the features of coming Cardinal games will be the gala fireworks display following next Tuesday night's game at Busch Memorial Stadium against the Cincinnati Reds. The Reds also will be in St. Louis next Wednesday night. Good seats are available at all prices.

Pirates Drop 3rd Game

He went into Wednesday night's game with one hit in the last 26 times at bat. After flying out to Mack Jones in the first inning, he ended a 0-for-14 famine with a single to center. But in the fifth, with Clemente on second with a double, he was thrown out by Dennis Menke for the third out. Pitcher Ken Johnson got him on strikes in the eighth.

With 20 games to go, Stargell must get his form back if the Pirates are to win the pennant -and Walker knows it, but he's just as hopeful as Stargell.

"With so many games to play, you can't stay hot all the time," Walker says. "Once you get a little disturbed, you begin to fight it. It just takes a little while to get out of it."

Stock Cars Put Racing Show on the Road

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Sports Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WATKINS GLEN, N. Y.— (NEA)—Ten years ago, the sight of 40 ponderous Grand National stock cars touring the beautiful 2.3-mile road course here would have sickened sports car fans.

"I never thought I'd see the day," said John Loving, a Porsche owner and novice driver from Washington, D.C., "when road racing would let oval track farm boys with their hot Detroit barges come to Watkins Glen."

Today stock car road racing is the fastest growing type of auto racing in the country and people like John Loving are avid supporters.

Its success has virtually wiped out all the prejudices that once existed between the two breeds.

"All the stock and Indy car drivers do is turn left and gun it," the sports car people would say, turning up their noses. "Any fool can do that."

The southern-dominated world of stock car racing and midwestern-oriented sprint and midget car racing circuits, meanwhile, delighted in calling sports car people "strokers and brokers"—stroker meaning slow and broker meaning poor little rich boy.

Stock car racing on road tracks met with mixed reaction nationally when it was introduced six years ago. But the idea was an immediate hit at Riverside in California.

Three years ago, Trenton, N.J., Speedway promoter Sam Nunis brought in Jimmy Clark and Dan Gurney, who were gods to sports car lovers, to drive Indy cars at Trenton.

"The five or six thousand sports car fans who showed up to see Clark and Gurney were sold when they saw our kind of racing live," Nunis said.

Final prejudices were struck down in nearly all sections of the country when Grand Prix heroes Clark and Graham Hill won the Indianapolis 500 back-to-back and oval track darlings like A. J. Foyt began to show well in road races abroad.

"Now," said National Association of Stock Car Racing (NASCAR) president Bill France, "it's a proven thing that a good driver is a good driver no matter what kind of track he's on."

The "integration" of auto racing, however, has not solved all of the sport's immense organizational problems.

From some corners of racing come pleas for a czar to oversee all of racing—everything from drags to go-karting.

Right now, the closest thing to a czar in racing is Bill France. He is the man who organized NASCAR and brought order and dignity to stock car racing. But France and others in the administrative end of racing see no need for an overall director.

After a race at Trenton recently, Nunis sat back and pondered the question of a racing czar.

"We've already got a czar —the people who pay their money. They demand good competition and action and, in automobile racing, that's what they get."

Q—Who was the "Good Gray Poet"?

A—Walt Whitman.

Missouri 8th On Defense Contract List

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — California, New York and Texas — in that order — got the biggest slices of defense prime contract spending in fiscal 1966, Pentagon figures showed today.

California, heavy in aerospace and electronics industries, received $5.8 billion in prime contract awards — 18.3 per cent of the $35.7 billion spent for military goods or services in the fiscal year that ended last June 30.

New York's share in defense spending totaled $2.8 billion and Texas followed with $2.29 billion.

The Texas total was up $850 million over the previous year, due mainly to contract awards for helicopters ticketed for Viet Nam. California's total climbed an estimated $650 million and New York contracts rose by $570 million.

All 50 states and the District of Columbia got a chunk of the money put out by the Defense Department — biggest spender of federal funds — but aside from the top three only seven other states received over $1 billion in contracts.

These were Connecticut with $2.05 billion, Pennsylvania with $1.67 billion, Ohio $1.59 billion, Massachusetts $1.33 billion, Missouri $1.11 billion, New Jersey $1.09 billion and Indiana $1.07 billion.

Overall, prime contract awards surged upward by nearly $10 billion from fiscal 1965's $26.63 billion. Civil functions of the Army Corps of Engineers for flood control and rivers and harbors work were not included in the tabulation.

The Pentagon said the breakdown provides no direct indication of where the actual production work was done. For the most part, it said, state figures indicate where a product was finally processed and assembled or where construction or service was performed.

A spokesman said the Pentagon is compiling a list of the companies who received the biggest dollar amounts in contract awards.

Kansas received contracts in fiscal 1966 totaling $312.6 million, Nebraska $80.5 million; Oklahoma $158.5 million; Arkansas $95.7 million; Colorado $255.9 million; Iowa $247.6 million, and Illinois $919.8 million.

All 5 State Mental Hospitals Accredited

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - The office of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes reports that for the first time in history all five Missouri mental hospitals have received accreditation.

One year's accreditation was given to the Fulton, Nevada and Farmington hospitals and three-year accreditation to the St. Louis and St. Joseph hospitals. Only the St. Louis institution has been accredited in the past.

The accreditations are conditional, said Dr. George A. Ulett director of the division. The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals said a number of factors must be corrected before full approval can be given.

Intruder Turns Chef

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Lansing police can't blame hunger as the motive for a break-in in a downtown restaurant.

They said that whoever broke into the eating place brought his own chicken and cooked it over a coffee-maker heating unit. The intruder did take a few french fried onion rings, they added.

Shooting Husband Is Against Law

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A housewife who accused her husband of beating her asked a city judge for permission to shoot him.

"Is it against the law for me to get a shotgun and shoot him between the eyes?" asked the woman, testifying Tuesday in city court.

"It's against the law," replied Judge Andrew J. Doyle, "but it seems to be the accepted custom these days for women to shoot their husbands."

Doyle dismissed an assault charge against the husband, who claimed he whipped his wife in self-defense after she threw rocks at him.

At least 15 chemical elements are essential to the human body.

Missouri 8th On Defense Contract List

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — California, New York and Texas — in that order — got the biggest slices of defense prime contract spending in fiscal 1966, Pentagon figures showed today.

California, heavy in aerospace and electronics industries, received $5.8 billion in prime contract awards — 18.3 per cent of the $35.7 billion spent for military goods or services in the fiscal year that ended last June 30.

New York's share in defense spending totaled $2.8 billion and Texas followed with $2.29 billion.

The Texas total was up $850 million over the previous year, due mainly to contract awards for helicopters ticketed for Viet Nam. California's total climbed an estimated $650 million and New York contracts rose by $570 million.

All 50 states and the District of Columbia got a chunk of the money put out by the Defense Department — biggest spender of federal funds — but aside from the top three only seven other states received over $1 billion in contracts.

These were Connecticut with $2.05 billion, Pennsylvania with $1.67 billion, Ohio $1.59 billion, Massachusetts $1.33 billion, Missouri $1.11 billion, New Jersey $1.09 billion and Indiana $1.07 billion.

Overall, prime contract awards surged upward by nearly $10 billion from fiscal 1965's $26.63 billion. Civil functions of the Army Corps of Engineers for flood control and rivers and harbors work were not included in the tabulation.

The Pentagon said the breakdown provides no direct indication of where the actual production work was done. For the most part, it said, state figures indicate where a product was finally processed and assembled or where construction or service was performed.

A spokesman said the Pentagon is compiling a list of the companies who received the biggest dollar amounts in contract awards.

Kansas received contracts in fiscal 1966 totaling $312.6 million, Nebraska $80.5 million; Oklahoma $158.5 million; Arkansas $95.7 million; Colorado $255.9 million; Iowa $247.6 million, and Illinois $919.8 million.

All 5 State Mental Hospitals Accredited

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - The office of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes reports that for the first time in history all five Missouri mental hospitals have received accreditation.

One year's accreditation was given to the Fulton, Nevada and Farmington hospitals and three-year accreditation to the St. Louis and St. Joseph hospitals. Only the St. Louis institution has been accredited in the past.

The accreditations are conditional, said Dr. George A. Ulett director of the division. The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals said a number of factors must be corrected before full approval can be given.

Intruder Turns Chef

LANSING, Mich. AP — Lansing police can't blame hunger as the motive for a break-in for a downtown restaurant.

They said that whoever broke into the eating place brought his own chicken and cooked it over a coffee-maker heating unit. The intruder did take a few french fried onion rings, they added.

Shooting Husband Is Against Law

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A housewife who accused her husband of beating her asked a city judge for permission to shoot him.

"Is it against the law for me to get a shotgun and shoot him between the eyes?" asked the woman, testifying Tuesday in city court.

"It's against the law," replied Judge Andrew J. Doyle, "but it seems to be the accepted custom these days for women to shoot their husbands."

Doyle dismissed an assault charge against the husband, who claimed he whipped his wife in self-defense after she threw rocks at him.

At least 15 chemical elements are essential to the human body.

For Today From The Upper Room

Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men. (II Corinthians 3;2)

PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, we pray for Thy mighty power so that we can be able to live here for Thee and to be a living epistle Christ known and read of all men. In His spirit we pray, as He taught us, "Our Father who art in heaven . . . . . .Amen."

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: You hear a lot these days about overbearing mothers. How about married daughters who think they are entitled to mother's services and all the privileges of the home they left?

When our daughter was first married she had a habit of helping herself to our Christmas ornaments, linens, pots and pans -- whatever she wanted.

Finally I told her I wouldn't touch her things if she agreed not to touch mine. She snapped, "I'm shocked that you would be so petty," and added, "After all, I used to live here."

Yesterday my neighbor came over in a state of shock. Her daughter had telephoned to say she was leaving her children with "Gram" while she and her husband took a two week vacation. "Gram" told her she was sorry but she and "Gramps" were taking a vacation, too, and she'd have to make other arrangements.

Her daughter shouted, "Well, if you don't care about your grandchildren I'll see to it that you aren't bothered with them in the future," and hung up.

Please print this letter and tell mothers what to do. We hate to lose our daughters just because they marry, but we hate to be taken advantage of, too. Where's the line" -- HONEST INQUIRER

Dear Honest: The line is where a mother draws it. Some girls would leave their kids forever and move out the whole house if they could get away with it.

It's a safe bet that the daughter who ran roughshod over her mother when she lived at home will continue to do so after marriage. In such families, the children have trained the parents.

Where there is love, respect and room for honest expression, you will not find the kind of exploitation and emotional blackmail your neighbor is experiencing.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you have against unmarried females anyway? In a recent column (you were addressing yourself to a self-pitying wife) you said marriage had given her "respectability." Are you suggesting that without marriage a woman can't be respectable? Do you believe that all unmarried girls are out catting around?

You also said "Marriage gives a woman security." If married women are so secure why do so many married women work?

Your last line was a gas: "Marriage is not for everyone." You can say that again. Of the 15 married people in this office marriage means nothing to 9 of them. -- MISS 20-20 VISION

Dear Vision: Since your vision is so good I hope you can see something decent in the world. I saw no evidence from your letter. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday my husband took his mother and me to lunch in a restaurant. I picked up an onion ring with my fingers, which I admit was poor manners, but I did it and I am sorry.

My husband glared at me and said, "Put that down and eat with a knife and fork or I'll move to another table. I'm ashamed to be seen eating with you."

I nearly cried. If this had occurred when the two of us were alone he wouldn't have said anything. Why must he always wait until he has an audience to correct me? -- HUMILATED

Dear H: Because he wants to add to your discomfort.

You violated a rule of etiquette, but he did something worse. He violated a marriage vow -- the one that reads, "To love and to cherish -- till death do us part."

Is alcoholism a disease? How can the alcoholic be treated? Is there a cure? Read the booklet "Alcoholism -- Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 35¢ in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

To the Editor:

On a recent "non - political" trip President Johnson made a speech wherein he called upon the American people to give him a mandate to continue his present policies. This mandate is supposed to be in the form of a Democrat victory in November.

Conversely, a Republican victory in November should advise him that we are tired of wars without victory, higher taxes, runaway inflation, increased crime, moral decay, riots and looting, expanded federal controls, higher federal debt, and a policy that is more concerned with the coddling of criminals than with the protection of law abiding citizens.

To impress him with this dissatisfaction it is essential that we replace "rubber - stamp" Congressmen with men and women with the courage to stand up to their convictions and for the welfare of the state.

Republicans have never had so many valid issues, but it is going to require an all - out effort on the part of every concerned citizen to obtain victory.

It means that we will have to contribute time and money to the support of the candidates who will not rubber stamp the every wish of the "Great Society."

To the Editor:

A bill called the "Demonstration Cities Act" has been passed by the so called rubber stamp" Senate and apparently this matter has been kept very quiet as the general public seems to be quite ignorant of it.

A key portion of the plan in this bill is to put courts, schools, local governments and finances of all cities under the control of a commissar.

And this commissar is Robert C. Weaver, Secretary of Johnson's new Housing and Urban Development Department.

The bill--flagrantly racist--gives Weaver the power to require the cities to actually condemn and tear down houses and destroy whole neighborhoods to bring about integration.

To the Editor:

It would seem that the time has come for candidates for certain public offices to do some careful soul-searching, and thoughful calculation.

For instance: How many of my constituents are members of one or another of the various unions, and what percentage of the total voting strength do they represent? Next, how many of the union members are disenchanted with recent union tactics, or at least with the tactics of some leaders?

And most important of all, how many of my constituents would favor some reasonable controls on union activities?

There is small doubt that the recent airlines strike has had an unfortunate effect on the whole labor-management field. Neither Congress nor the President were willing to "pick up the tab." So while they outfumbled each other, a disastrous settlement was made.

Locally we have had two separate defections in union ranks. First there was the split at McDonnell, then the split in the ranks of the sheet metal workers on the hiring hall demand.

During the recent primary campaign, I asked a friend who is a member of one of the unions, whether or not his union favored a certain candidate. His answer, "I don't know, but I wouldn't vote for him if they did." The "solid union vote" is a political myth.

New Stock Brokers Feel Now Is Good Time to Buy

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP)—The mask of Wall Street seldom reveals its anguish or hope, for a Wall Street broker must abide with outward serenity his personal extremes of black pessimism and glittering optimism.

The vice president of one of the nation's best-known investment advisory houses described a few days ago the members of a group that includes some of the sharpest brains in finance.

"They're a cynical bunch," he said. "They listen and chuckle but they don't swallow anything. They go and check it out."

But under even the most dismal circumstances it isn't difficult to find enthusiasm, for that, too, is basic to selling securities to the country's 21 million stockholders.

As the market slid recently to its lowest in two years, six young registered representatives who had just been certified to sell, gathered over lunch and talked bullishly.

"I'd rather be coming in now than when the market is at the top," said Reginald Johnston, 28, of Boston, who had forsaken a job as industrial salesman to sell securities.

As he spoke the Dow Jones industrial stock average was in a steep decline through 800.

"There are better buying opportunities now," he said. "The big job is to convince people to buy. Perhaps a high market would be more difficult to sell; the investors would be satisfied with their brokers."

A low market "can only work to our advantage," said Blair Purcell, 29, who was a partner in a metropolitan Washington roofing materials company. "It will be difficult at first, but this is an opportunity to buy the right stock."

Michael Mahood, 26, of Houston, Tex., who once enjoyed the steadiness of an engineering job, was bullish too. He was less happy about his personal situation. "I've lost money right now," he said, "and I'm not jumping in myself."

These three young brokers, along with Ronald Swart of Detroit, Patrick Westmoreland of Santa Monica, Calif., and Arthur Kalbhenn of Philadelphia, had just completed a six-month course on investing at the brokerage house of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis.

By now they are back home selling to their first customers. After 10 or 12 months they lose their trainee's salary of $700 a month and go on straight commission, which amounts to $15,000 or $20,000 after five years. Beyond that there is no limit.

Historians give the name "Model Parliament" to the English Parliament of 1295 because it set the pattern for the English Parliament of today.

More Towns Revert To Standard Time

More Missouri towns have decided to abandon Daylight Saving Time ahead of the customary date of the last Sunday in October.

Sedalia voted to revert to standard time at 2 a.m. Sept. 11. Mayor Ralph Walker pointed to the conflict of time between the schools and industry. Neosho's City Council voted on Tuesday night to return to standard time Sept. 11 and the Seneca council voted likewise.

Joplin will abandon DST Oct. 2.

Kirksville won't join the shift. Its city commission voted to stay with the advance time until Oct. 30.

Abraham Lincoln was offered the job as Washington state's first governor but he declined.

School Bells Silent

SOMEBAP, Calif. AP -- Unless a teacher is found, school bells won't ring this year for the 30 children in this Siskiyou County logging hamlet.

The job pays $5,500 a year, and the town pays for lodging in a trailer, water and electricity.

There's another $2,000 if the teacher can drive a school bus.

Time to Move

GATLINBURG, Tenn. AP -- Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Bass Jr., of Nashville, didn't savor the idea of being near growling black bears which tore a car seat and ripped a gash in the Bass tent in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

"I think they were hungry," Bass said, as he and his wife headed for a motel.

Family Computer

RICHMOND, Ind. AP -- A computer used for the first time by Richmond High School to figure class schedules placed Sherry Pemberton, 16, a junior, in a social science class taught by her father, John.

The computer could have picked 10 other science teachers.

THE PRAYER

For Today From The Upper Room

Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men. (II Corinthians 3:2)

PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, we pray for Thy mighty power so that we can be able to live here for Thee and to be a living epistle Christ known and read of all men. In His spirit we pray, as He taught us, "Our Father who art in heaven . . . . . .Amen."

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: You hear a lot these days about overbearing mothers. How about married daughters who think they are entitled to mother's services and all the privileges of the home they left?

When our daughter was first married she had a habit of helping herself to our Christmas ornaments, linens, pots and pans -- whatever she wanted.

Finally I told her I wouldn't touch her things if she agreed not to touch mine. She snapped, "I'm shocked that you would be so petty," and added, "After all, I used to live here."

Yesterday my neighbor came over in a state of shock. Her daughter had telephoned to say she was leaving her children with "Gram" while she and her husband took a two week vacation. "Gram" told her she was sorry but she and "Gramps" were taking a vacation, too, and she'd have to make other arrangements.

Her daughter shouted, "Well, if you don't care about your grandchildren I'll see to it that you aren't bothered with them in the future," and hung up.

Please print this letter and tell mothers what to do. We hate to lose our daughters just because they marry, but we hate to be taken advantage of, too. Where's the line" -- HONEST INQUIRER

Dear Honest: The line is where a mother draws it. Some girls would leave their kids forever and move out the whole house if they could get away with it.

It's a safe bet that the daughter who ran roughshod over her mother when she lived at home will continue to do so after marriage. In such families, the children have trained the parents.

Where there is love, respect and room for honest expression, you will not find the kind of exploitation and emotional blackmail your neighbor is experiencing.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you have against unmarried females anyway? In a recent column (you were addressing yourself to a self-pitying wife) you said marriage had given her "respectability." Are you suggesting that without marriage a woman can't be respectable? Do you believe that all unmarried girls are out catting around?

You also said "Marriage gives a woman security." If married women are so secure why do so many married women work?

Your last line was a gas: "Marriage is not for everyone." You can say that again. Of the 15 married people in this office marriage means nothing to 9 of them. -- MISS 20-20 VISION

Dear Vision: Since your vision is so good I hope you can see something decent in the world. I saw no evidence from your letter. Thanks for writing.

Dean Ann Landers: Yesterday my husband took his mother and me to lunch in a restaurant. I picked up an onion ring with my fingers, which I admit was poor manners, but I did it and I am sorry.

My husband glared at me and said, "Put that down and eat with a knife and fork or I'll move to another table. I'm ashamed to be seen eating with you."

I nearly cried. If this had occurred when the two of us were alone he wouldn't have said anything. Why must he always wait until he has an audience to correct me? -- HUMILATED

Dear H: Because he wants to add to your discomfort.

You violated a rule of etiquette, but he did something worse. He violated a marriage vow -- the one that reads, "To love and to cherish -- till death do us part."

To the Editor:

On a recent "non-political" trip President Johnson made a speech wherein he called upon the American people to give him a mandate to continue his present policies. This mandate is supposed to be in the form of a Democrat victory in November.

Conversely, a Republican victory in November should advise him that we are tired of wars without victory, higher taxes, runaway inflation, increased crime, moral decay, riots and looting, expanded federal controls, higher federal debt, and a policy that is more concerned with the coddling of criminals than with the protection of law abiding citizens.

To impress him with this dissatisfaction it is essential that we replace "rubber-stamp" Congressmen with men and women with the courage to stand up to their convictions and for the welfare of the state.

Republicans have never had so many valid issues, but it is going to require an all-out effort on the part of every concerned citizen to obtain victory.

It means that we will have to contribute time and money to the support of the candidates who will not rubber stamp the every wish of the "Great Society."

To the Editor:

A bill called the "Demonstration Cities Act" has been passed by the so called rubber stamp" Senate and apparently this matter has been kept very quiet as the general public seems to be quite ignorant of it.

A key portion of the plan in this bill is to put courts, schools, local governments and finances of all cities under the control of a commissar.

And this commissar is Robert C. Weaver, Secretary of Johnson's new Housing and Urban Development Department.

The bill--flagrantly racist--gives Weaver the power to require the cities to actually condemn and tear down houses and destroy whole neighborhoods to bring about integration.

To the Editor:

It would seem that the time has come for candidates for certain public offices to do some careful soul-searching, and thoughful calculation.

For instance: How many of my constituents are members of one or another of the various unions, and what percentage of the total voting strength do they represent? Next, how many of the union members are disenchanted with recent union tactics, or at least with the tactics of some leaders?

And most important of all, how many of my constituents would favor some reasonable controls on union activities?

There is small doubt that the recent airlines strike has had an unfortunate effect on the whole labor-management field. Neither Congress nor the President were willing to "pick up the tab." So while they outfumbled each other, a disastrous settlement was made.

Locally we have had two separate defections in union ranks. First there was the split at McDonnell, then the split in the ranks of the sheet metal workers on the hiring hall demand.

During the recent primary campaign, I asked a friend who is a member of one of the unions, whether or not his union favored a certain candidate. His answer, "I don't know, but I wouldn't vote for him if they did." The "solid union vote" is a political myth.

New Stock Brokers Feel Now Is Good Time to Buy

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP)—The mask of Wall Street seldom reveals its anguish or hope, for a Wall Street broker must abide with outward serenity his personal extremes of black pessimism and glittering optimism.

The vice president of one of the nation's best-known investment advisory houses described a few days ago the members of a group that includes some of the sharpest brains in finance.

"They're a cynical bunch," he said. "They listen and chuckle but they don't swallow anything. They go and check it out."

But under even the most dismal circumstances it isn't difficult to find enthusiasm, for that, too, is basic to selling securities to the country's 21 million stockholders.

As the market slid recently to its lowest in two years, six young registered representatives who had just been certified to sell, gathered over lunch and talked bullishly.

"I'd rather be coming in now than when the market is at the top," said Reginald Johnston, 28, of Boston, who had forsaken a job as industrial salesman to sell securities.

As he spoke the Dow Jones industrial stock average was in a steep decline through 800.

"There are better buying opportunities now," he said. "The big job is to convince people to buy. Perhaps a high market would be more difficult to sell; the investors would be satisfied with their brokers."

A low market "can only work to our advantage," said Blair Purcell, 29, who was a partner in a metropolitan Washington roofing materials company. "It will be difficult at first, but this is an opportunity to buy the right stock."

Michael Mahood, 26, of Houston, Tex., who once enjoyed the steadiness of an engineering job, was bullish too. He was less happy about his personal situation. "I've lost money right now," he said, "and I'm not jumping in myself."

These three young brokers, along with Ronald Swart of Detroit, Patrick Westmoreland of Santa Monica, Calif., and Arthur Kalbhenn of Philadelphia, had just completed a six-month course on investing at the brokerage house of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis.

By now they are back home selling to their first customers. After 10 or 12 months they lose their trainee's salary of $700 a month and go on straight commission, which amounts to $15,000 or $20,000 after five years. Beyond that there is no limit.

More Towns Revert To Standard Time

More Missouri towns have decided to abandon Daylight Saving Time ahead of the customary date of the last Sunday in October.

Sedalia voted to revert to standard time at 2 a.m. Sept. 11. Mayor Ralph Walker pointed to the conflict of time between the schools and industry. Neosho's City Council voted on Tuesday night to return to standard time Sept. 11 and the Seneca council voted likewise.

Joplin will abandon DST Oct. 2.

Kirksville won't join the shift. Its city commission voted to stay with the advance time until Oct. 30.

Abraham Lincoln was offered the job as Washington state's first governor but he declined.

School Bells Silent

SOMEBAR, Calif. AP - Unless a teacher is found, school bells won't ring this year for the 30 children in this Siskiyou County logging hamlet.

The job pays $5,500 a year, and the town pays for lodging in a trailer, water and electricity.

There's another $2,000 if the teacher can drive a school bus.

Time to Move

GATLINBURG, Tenn. AP -- Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Bass Jr., of Nashville, didn't savor the idea of being near growling black bears which tore a car seat and ripped a gash in the Bass tent in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

"I think they were hungry," Bass said, as he and his wife headed for a motel.

The computer could have picked 10 other science teachers.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Thursday, Sept. 8, the 251st day of 1966. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1900, Galveston, Tex., and many surrounding towns were damaged by one of the worst hurricanes and floods in U.S. history.

On this date:

In 1636, Harvard College was established.

In 1934, the luxury line Morro Castle burned off the coast of New Jersey with a loss of 134 lives.

In 1935, Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana was assassinated in Baton Rouge, the state capital.

In 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared a limited national emergency.

In 1945, American troops began the formal occupation of Tokyo.

October Draft Quota Boosted

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon Wednesday announced a draft call of 43,700 men in November and a boost to 49,200 men for October, 3,000 over the originally announced figure.

At the same time, the Defense Department said induction standards will be lowered effective Oct. 1 to get under way Secretary Robert S. McNamara's program for training 40,000 men this year who could not meet previous reguirements.

The 3,000-man increase in the October draft call raised the manpower request close to the 53,000 called in May 1953 as the Korean War approached its end.

Peak calls during the Korean conflict reached 80,000 a month.

All men drafted in October and November will be assigned to the Army.

The Pentagon said it expects a substantially lower draft call in December when Army training operations "will be scheduled to avoid the entrance of new inductees into active duty during the holiday season." This month, 37,300 men are being drafted. The September draft call also had been revised upward by 6,000 men over the figure announced last month.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Thursday, Sept. 8, the 251st day of 1966. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1900, Galveston, Tex., and many surrounding towns were damaged by one of the worst hurricanes and floods in U.S. history.

On this date:

In 1636, Harvard College was established.

In 1935, Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana was assassinated in Baton Rouge, the state capital.

In 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared a limited national emergency.

In 1945, American troops began the formal occupation of Tokyo.

Ten years ago—The Soviet government announced its first minimum wage law would go into effect Jan. 1, 1957.

Five years ago —Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev said he was ready to negotiate with President John F. Kennedy on the Berlin crisis.

One year ago — Hurricane Betsy swept across southeast Florida, lashing the land with rain and winds ranging from 120 to 140 miles an hour.

and nuns of a militant minority opposing the government and the election launched a three-day fast to promote a boycott of the polls. Loudspeakers at a Saigon pagoda proclaimed: "A vote on Sunday will be a vote against Viet Nam."

——While air squadrons carried the main load of allied offensive operations, lessened ground activity was relfected in a reduction of casualties on both sides last week from the week of Aug. 21-27. The U.S. Command announced 74 Americans were killed in combat, 570 wounded and 10 missing or captured. Over all, allied deaths were listed as 187, against 885 enemy dead.

——In Tokyo, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor said he believed the Communists have lost more than 100,000 men from combat, disease and desertion this year. Replacements "By the painfully slow methods of infiltration under air attack must present a very serious problem to the enemy leaders," the retired chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff and former ambassador to Saigon said in a luncheon address. He said, however, more U.S. troops and more air strikes will be needed to bring North Viet Nam to terms.

——U.S. Navy officials said expanding demands of the war have so altered original estimates of U.S. construction programs in Viet Nam that $200 million more will be required to complete projects already on the books.

tions of Laos from Thai bases at Takhliv, Korat, Idorn and Ubon. Other bases are at Sattaheep and Khan Kaen.

The Thai and U.S. governments do not acknowledge this, even though Bangkok bar girls and illiterate peasants for miles around the bases know what is going on -- as do the Communists, judging from their broadcasts.

About 27,000 American troops now are in Thailand but only part of the U.S. buildup is advertised.

At Korat, in central Thailand, the 9th Logistics Command openly maintains "pre-positioned stock" in quantities vast enough to arm and equip more than an army division if troops had to be airlifted in quickly.

Sealed warehouses, with interior humidity carefully maintained at 40 per cent, protect the gear from tropical rot.

The war has touched neighboring Cambodia in another way.

American officials insist North Vietnamese and Viet Cong guerrilla units fighting in South Viet Nam operate out of Cambodian refuges.

"I have seen them with my own eyes moving back into Cambodia under attack," a U.S. official said in Saigon.

American field commanders have told newsmen the Chu Pong mountain range stretching across the Viet Nam-Cambodian frontier is a Communist nest -- and a route for Red infiltration.

At least three North Vietnamese regiments fighting in central Viet Nam are said to take orders from what is described as the 119th Division headquarters stationed in Cambodia.

In addition, American officials say there is no doubt the so-called Ho Chi Minh trail from North Viet Nam passes across Cambodian soil, giving Communist troops and supplies a route to battlefields in central and south Viet Nam.

Cambodia's ruler, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, vociferously denies his country is either a staging place or highway for Communist troops.

Sihanouk counter - charges that planes and troops based in South Viet Nam have shot up Cambodian border villages and violated Cambodian soil without provocation.

Whichever account is true, it is obvious war has visited Cambodia.

It also has again touched Laos, as proven by a recent Washington announcement that 30 U.S. military men have been killed in officially secret operations in Laos since 1961.

Most of these men reportedly were pilots, with some killed recently while bombing and straffing the Laos section of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Unconfirmed reports in Saigon say a large part of the U.S. air effort in late July and early August was directed at Laotian sectors of the trail.

Clearly, the circle of conflict in Southeast Asia has widened.

Johnson Hails Moscow Music Festival Victors

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson hailed 13 young American musicians —winners of an international competition in Moscow — for doing more than diplomats to inspire understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union.

He bestowed the title "national treasures" on the winners Wednesday night before a White House audience that included some of the elite of America's world of music and the performing arts. With the Soviet minister counselor, Alexander I. Zinchuk, in a front-row East Room seat, Johnson declared:

"I hope history will record this example of how music has reached across the oceans, the walls and the ideologies that separate us, and found response in the hearts of the Russian people. I hope that it will be followed by other actions in other fields so that other threads of understanding can be strung across the space between us."

Afterwards, mingling at a buffet supper in the state dining room, Zinchuk aaid Johnson's remarks were "very true."

Five of the winners — three singers, a pianist and a cellist — staged an hour-long concert, receiving ovations from the 350 White House guests and congratulations from the Johnsons and pianist Van Cliburn, winner of the international Tchaikovsky competition when it was inaugurated in 1958.

Cliburn, 34, of Longview, Tex., was cast in a new role — master of ceremonies.

The star of the evening was statuesque soprano Jane Marsh, 24, of Mill Valley, Calif., and New York, who won first prize in the vocal division of the Moscow competition — the first American to receive that honor.

Amid all the emphasis on excellence, the White House stage lighting failed and the President had to make his speech in a darkened ballroom.

There were warm greetings, even kisses and hugs, as the famous visitors went through the presidential receiving line in the Blue Room after the performance.

Bearded author John Steinbeck was one who got hugs and pats from the President.

Mrs. Johnson summed it up as "a beautiful and brilliant evening."

Democrats Tap O'Connor

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Frank D. O'Connor, trying to become New York's first Democratic governor since 1958, faced vote-cutting opposition today from a Liberal party ticket headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.

O'Connor, pledging a "mighty effort" to unseat Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, smashed his way to a first-ballot victory at a nominating convention in Buffalo Wednesday night.

Drawing heavily on votes from upstate New York delegations, O'Connor, 56, president of the New York City Council, hurtled past his only opponent on the convention floor, millionaire businessman Howard Samuels of Canandaigua.

Rockefeller, seeking his third term, is assured of nomination at the Republican convention in Rochester tonight. He seemed certain to benefit by Roosevelt's acceptance late Wednesday of an invitation to run for governor on the Liberal party's ticket.

The Liberals, a splinter group that broke away from the Democratic gubernatorial fold for the first time in its 22-year history, meet in New York tonight to make the nomination formal.

Alex Rose, Liberal party chairman, said the party's own poll, taken about 10 days ago, showed that O'Connor would defeat Gov. Rockefeller and splinter party candidates by about 600,000 votes, despite the Roosevelt candidacy.

His comment came in reply to a newsman's question asking if Roosevelt's candidacy would wreck O'Connor's chances and insure Rockefeller's re-election.

"No," Rose said, adding, "of course (O'Connor) might kick it away in the campaign. But our intention is not to ruin O'Connor or the Democrats. We are fighting for principles."

Roosevelt withdrew two weeks ago as an active campaigner for the Democratic nomination, contending that the party's nomination was boss-controlled. He charged that the nomination had been promised to O'Connor a year ago.

In accepting the Liberals' offer, Roosevelt said he was doing so as "an independent Democrat."

The Liberals usually draw from 250,000 to 350,000 votes, more than enough to make serious inroads in a close fight.

U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, who had been cool toward O'Connor's candidacy and refused to take a public stand in preconvention maneuvering, introduced O'Connor to the nominating convention as "the next governor."

A Democrat has not held the governor's chair since 1958, when Rockefeller defeated W. Averell Harriman.

Autopsy Slated On K.C. Sleeping Sickness Victim

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Results of an autopsy are being awaited by health officials of metropolitan Kansas City to determine the cause of death in the case of a 22-year-old man.

Dr. John R. Philip, director of health for Kansas City, said the death of Larry Howard Swofford of Kansas City was the result of an encephalitis-like illness of unknown cause.

An autopsy was performed Wednesday at the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, Kan., where Swofford died. Findings of the autopsy will be released by the Kansas City Health Department.

Dr. Philip said that any virus disease may cause an encephalitis-like illness, but there are only four types in the U.S. which are carried by mosquitoes.

Swofford, owner of the Gladstone Cement Finishing Co. became ill at his home on Aug. 21 and entered Smithville Community Hospital four days later. He transferred to the KU Medical Center on Aug. 28.

Meanwhile, two victims of viral encephalitis in nearby Johnson County in Kansas were reported making good progress.

Dr. Robert Cavitt, director of the Johnson County Health Department, said one of the victims, an Overland Park, Kan., boy, reported for school last week.

A girl at Shawnee, Kan. is recovering at her grandmother's home in Junction City, Kan., and is making satisfactory progress, Dr. Cavitt said.

Mosquito borne sleeping sickness is not contagious from person to person, the health director said. The disease is contracted from the bite of a female culex mosquito which must have first bitten an infected bird, animal or person, he said.

Cheap Campaign

ANNAPOLIS, Md. AP -- A report shows that one of the candidates for Democratic nomination for governor of Maryland has campaign expenses totaling $4.07.

Andrew J. Easter, who campaigns on the slogan "Christmas for everybody," reported he spent the money on a Santa Claus mask.

(FORT WORTH) - L.E. Fleming of Fort Worth went to a Fleming family reunion last weekend and was particularly amused by an anecdote about his mother, Mrs. Mildred Fleming, and her two brothers.

Some 20 years ago, Mrs. Fleming was in a San Antonio hospital. Her older brothers, Frank and Leonard, both wellstricken in years, went to see her.

They'd been born and reared in the country and they didn't know much about hospitals.

They doddered down a hall, peering into rooms, and saw a ward containing six women patients. One of the, her hair cut almost as short as a man's, was in traction -- legs and arms were trussed and held in place with pulleys.

Frank was shocked.

"Leonard," he whispered to his brother, "did you notice they have men and women in the same ward?"

"Surely not!" said Leonard.

"Well, look," said Frank.

Leonard looked. He drew in his breath. He, too, was shocked.

"I don't like it," said Frank.

"I don't, either," said Leonard.

tions of Laos from Thai bases at Takhliv, Korat, Idorn and Ubon. Other bases are at Sattaheep and Khan Kaen.

The Thai and U.S. governments do not acknowledge this, even though Bangkok bar girls and illiterate peasants for miles around the bases know what is going on -- as do the Communists, judging from their broadcasts.

About 27,000 American troops now are in Thailand but only part of the U.S. buildup is advertised.

At Korat, in central Thailand, the 9th Logistics Command openly maintains "pre-positioned stock" in quantities vast enough to arm and equip more than an army division if troops had to be airlifted in quickly.

Sealed warehouses, with interior humidity carefully maintained at 40 per cent, protect the gear from tropical rot.

The war has touched neighboring Cambodia in another way.

American officials insist North Vietnamese and Viet Cong guerrilla units fighting in South Viet Nam operate out of Cambodian refuges.

"I have seen them with my own eyes moving back into Cambodia under attack," a U.S. official said in Saigon.

American field commanders have told newsmen the Chu Pong mountain range stretching across the Viet Nam-Cambodian frontier is a Communist nest -- and a route for Red infiltration.

At least three North Vietnamese regiments fighting in central Viet Nam are said to take orders from what is described as the 119th Division headquarters stationed in Cambodia.

In addition, American officials say there is no doubt the so-called Ho Chi Minh trail from North Viet Nam passes across Cambodian soil, giving Communist troops and supplies a route to battlefields in central and south Viet Nam.

Cambodia's ruler, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, vociferously denies his country is either a staging place or highway for Communist troops.

Sihanouk counter - charges that planes and troops based in South Viet Nam have shot up Cambodian border villages and violated Cambodian soil without provocation.

Whichever account is true, it is obvious war has visited Cambodia.

It also has again touched Laos, as proven by a recent Washington announcement that 30 U.S. military men have been killed in officially secret operations in Laos since 1961.

Most of these men reportedly were pilots, with some killed recently while bombing and straffing the Laos section of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Unconfirmed reports in Saigon say a large part of the U.S. air effort in late July and early August was directed at Laotian sectors of the trail.

Clearly, the circle of conflict in Southeast Asia has widened.

Johnson Hails Moscow Music Festival Victors

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson hailed 13 young American musicians — winners of an international competition in Moscow — for doing more than diplomats to inspire understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union.

He bestowed the title "national treasures" on the winners Wednesday night before a White House audience that included some of the elite of America's world of music and the performing arts. With the Soviet minister counselor, Alexander I. Zinchuk, in a front-row East Room seat, Johnson declared:

"I hope history will record this example of how music has reached across the oceans, the walls and the ideologies that separate us, and found response in the hearts of the Russian people. I hope that it will be followed by other actions in other fields so that other threads of understanding can be strung across the space between us."

Afterwards, mingling at a buffet supper in the state dining room, Zinchuk aaid Johnson's remarks were "very true."

Five of the winners — three singers, a pianist and a cellist — staged an hour-long concert, receiving ovations from the 350 White House guests and congratulations from the Johnsons and pianist Van Cliburn, winner of the international Tchaikovsky competition when it was inaugurated in 1958.

Cliburn, 34, of Longview, Tex., was cast in a new role — master of ceremonies.

The star of the evening was statuesque soprano Jane Marsh, 24, of Mill Valley, Calif., and New York, who won first prize in the vocal division of the Moscow competition — the first American to receive that honor.

Amid all the emphasis on excellence, the White House stage lighting failed and the President had to make his speech in a darkened ballroom.

There were warm greetings, even kisses and hugs, as the famous visitors went through the presidential receiving line in the Blue Room after the performance.

Bearded author John Steinbeck was one who got hugs and pats from the President.

Mrs. Johnson summed it up as "a beautiful and brilliant evening."

Democrats Tap O'Connor

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Frank D. O'Connor, trying to become New York's first Democratic governor since 1958, faced vote-cutting opposition today from a Liberal party ticket headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.

O'Connor, pledging a "mighty effort" to unseat Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, smashed his way to a first-ballot victory at a nominating convention in Buffalo Wednesday night.

Drawing heavily on votes from upstate New York delegations, O'Connor, 56, president of the New York City Council, hurtled past his only opponent on the convention floor, millionaire businessman Howard Samuels of Canandaigua.

Rockefeller, seeking his third term, is assured of nomination at the Republican convention in Rochester tonight. He seemed certain to benefit by Roosevelt's acceptance late Wednesday of an invitation to run for governor on the Liberal party's ticket.

The Liberals, a splinter group that broke away from the Democratic gubernatorial fold for the first time in its 22-year history, meet in New York tonight to make the nomination formal.

Alex Rose, Liberal party chairman, said the party's own poll, taken about 10 days ago, showed that O'Connor would defeat Gov. Rockefeller and splinter party candidates by about 600,000 votes, despite the Roosevelt candidacy.

His comment came in reply to a newsman's question asking if Roosevelt's candidacy would wreck O'Connor's chances and insure Rockefeller's re-election.

"No," Rose said, adding, "of course (O'Connor) might kick it away in the campaign. But our intention is not to ruin O'Connor or the Democrats. We are fighting for principles."

Roosevelt withdrew two weeks ago as an active campaigner for the Democratic nomination, contending that the party's nomination was boss-controlled. He charged that the nomination had been promised to O'Connor a year ago.

In accepting the Liberals' offer, Roosevelt said he was doing so as "an independent Democrat."

The Liberals usually draw from 250,000 to 350,000 votes, more than enough to make serious inroads in a close fight.

U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, who had been cool toward O'Connor's candidacy and refused to take a public stand in preconvention maneuvering, introduced O'Connor to the nominating convention as "the next governor."

A Democrat has not held the governor's chair since 1958, when Rockefeller defeated W. Averell Harriman.

Autopsy Slated On K.C. Sleeping Sickness Victim

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Results of an autopsy are being awaited by health officials of metropolitan Kansas City to determine the cause of death in the case of a 22-year-old man.

Dr. John R. Philip, director of health for Kansas City, said the death of Larry Howard Swofford of Kansas City was the result of an encephalitis-like illness of unknown cause.

An autopsy was performed Wednesday at the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, Kan., where Swofford died. Findings of the autopsy will be released by the Kansas City Health Department.

Dr. Philip said that any virus disease may cause an encephalitis-like illness, but there are only four types in the U.S. which are carried by mosquitoes.

Swofford, owner of the Gladstone Cement Finishing Co. became ill at his home on Aug. 21 and entered Smithville Community Hospital four days later. He transferred to the KU Medical Center on Aug. 28.

Meanwhile, two victims of viral encephalitis in nearby Johnson County in Kansas were reported making good progress.

Dr. Robert Cavitt, director of the Johnson County Health Department, said one of the victims, an Overland Park, Kan., boy, reported for school last week.

A girl at Shawnee, Kan. is recovering at her grandmother's home in Junction City, Kan., and is making satisfactory progress, Dr. Cavitt said.

Mosquito borne sleeping sickness is not contagious from person to person, the health director said. The disease is contracted from the bite of a female culex mosquito which must have first bitten an infected bird, animal or person, he said.

Cheap Campaign

ANNAPOLIS, Md. AP -- A report shows that one of the candidates for Democratic nomination for governor of Maryland has campaign expenses totaling $4.07.

Andrew J. Easter, who campaigns on the slogan "Christmas for everybody," reported he spent the money on a Santa Claus mask.

(FORT WORTH) - L.E. Fleming of Fort Worth went to a Fleming family reunion last weekend and was particularly amused by an anecdote about his mother, Mrs. Mildred Fleming, and her two brothers.

Some 20 years ago, Mrs. Fleming was in a San Antonio hospital. Her older brothers, Frank and Leonard, both wellstricken in years, went to see her.

They'd been born and reared in the country and they didn't know much about hospitals.

They doddered down a hall, peering into rooms, and saw a ward containing six women patients. One of the, her hair cut almost as short as a man's, was in traction -- legs and arms were trussed and held in place with pulleys.

Frank was shocked.

"Leonard," he whispered to his brother, "did you notice they have men and women in the same ward?"

"Surely not!" said Leonard.

"Well, look," said Frank.

Leonard looked. He drew in his breath. He, too, was shocked.

"I don't like it," said Frank.

"I don't, either," said Leonard.

"I think I'll complain about it," said Frank.

"Aw," said Leonard, "I guess it's all right -- you see they have him tied to the bed, don't you?"

How Athenian Democracy Died

By EDISON E. SHRUM

The 5th century was the great age of Athenian democracy; its age of growth and prosperity. The 4th century, conversely, was the period of its decline and fall.

The real expansion came with the defeat of Persia in 479 B.C. "Greek history for the next forty years," says Wells (Outline of History), "is a story of comparative peace and tranquillity. There were wars," he adds, "but they were not intense wars."

There was, in fact, the first Peloponnesian war, 460-454 B.C. But this, like our first World War, served merely as a stimulant to the untouched homeland. By and large, though, it was a period of peace and economic well-being, money pouring in from a prosperous commerce and from the Delos confederacy defense fund, which alone amounted to about $600,000 a year.

After a period of struggle between the conservative leaders, Cimon and Thucydides, and the liberal leader, Pericles, the latter succeeded in inaugerating the first of the Athenian New Deals. The government was democratized, state funds distributed for immense public works projects, shows, festivals, jobs, etc., until virtually the whole city was subsisting on state pay. The new system, in the words of Plutarch, distributing "plenty through every age and condition." Plutarch adds, however, that these measures also brought a change in the character of the Athenians -- "from sober, thrifty people that maintained themselves by their own labors, to lovers of expense, intemperance, and license."

Plato (Gorgias) likewise mentions this change. He indicates that the system of state payments which Pericles introduced -- "corrupted the Athenians, rendering them idle, cowardly, talkative and avaricious."

These, of course, were hindsights, written after Pericles' death and after the real score was obvious. During Pericles' lifetime he was immensely popular, even though there was evidence he helped bring on the second Pelopennesian war, 431-421 B.C.,; which was far more destructive than the first had been. He held the post of Strategos longer (15 years) than anyone before or after him. His long tenure of office and great popularity made him able to change the entire character of the government. Athens, says Thucydides, "though still in name a democracy, was in fact ruled by her first citizen."

The period between the second and third Peloponnesian wars was that of the demagogues. Aristophanes, in his play, The Knights, has one of these demagogues saying: "I can pilfer and snatch, and supply you with loaves from another mn's batch." And again, when he was being solicited to become a candidate for office, objecting that he could "but barely read-- in a kind of way." And the character supporting his candidacy admitting that: "That does make against ye! --The being able to read in any way."

Plutarch significantly notes that Cleon, one of the most famous of the demagogues of that period -- "got great influence by his exertions to please the old men, who trusted him to find them fees."

The Peace of Nicias (421 B.C.), after a fashion, ended the second Peloponnesian war. In reality, though, it went on as a sort of cold war, fought through subordinate nations and allies.

Two of these allies, Egesta and Leontine, were in Sicily. Syracuse, also on the island of Sicily, was an ally of Sparta. Difficulties arose between Syracuse and Egesta and Leontine, the latter then soliciting the aid of Athens. Their envoys, reaching Athens in 416 B.C., argued that "the Syracusans, having already extinguished one ally of Athens (Leontine), were now hard pressing upon a second (Egesta), and would thus successively subdue them all." All they asked from Athens, said the Egestans, was a naval expedition, and they would pay the cost of that.

The two leading men in Athens at that time were Nicias and Alcibiades. The former, an elderly man of unimpeachable character, opposed the Athenians interfering in the Sicilian affair. Alcibiades, then 34, and extremely popular, was the leader of the war party. His main claim to fame at that time was his extravagance. It was said that his Sophist instructors had taught him "to laugh at common ideas of justice, temperance, holiness and patriotism." Above all, though, he was a master of deceit.

A special investigative commission sent to Egesta was deceived and perhaps even bribed into bringing back an over-optimistic report on the military and economic strength of the Egestans. In addition, Alcibiades, to overcome the slight remaining resistance to the expedition, engineered the appointment of Nicias as commander along with himself and Lamachus.

Nicias, however, was still not sold on the project. He told the Athenians that he thought they ought to take "further counsel" before "hastily plunging, at the instance of aliens, into a dangerous war noway belonging to them." He pointed out that they were "leaving many enemies behind, and that you will bring upon yourselves new enemies from thence to help them." And that what they had with Sparta was not really a peace, but merely a truce "that would endure only so long as your power remains unimpaired; but on your first serious reverse, the enemy (Sparta) will take the opportunity of assailing you." Sicily, he said, was so far away that no conquest of it could be permanent and that it was absurd to venture on so dangerous an expedition that could result in no permanent good.

All of which, by the way, was borne out by subsequent events. Nevertheless, Nicias' advice was ignored and massive preparations made for what was to be the "most splendid armament ever assembled by a Greek state."

Enthusiasm mounted almost to hysteria. Only Socrates, the philosopher, and Meton, the astronomer, who discovered the lunar cycle, still questioned the wisdom of the expedition -- the latter so strongly that he is said to have pretended insanity to avoid going along.

Before the expedition could get under way, a city-wide act of vandalism revealed the strange mental state then prevailing among the Athenians. Defacing of the Hermae, the small heads of the god, Mercury, customarily placed in the vestibules of homes and temples, apparently drove the Athenians over the brink. They suspected everybody of everything, from treason on down.

After the great expeditionary force left, it came to their attention that Alcibiades himself had once, during a drunken escapade, defaced a few images. This in their crazed condition, was sufficient grounds for calling Alcibiades home for prosecution. Instead of coming, Alcibiades deserted to the Spartans, leaving the unenthusiastic Nicias in command of the expedition.

It arrived in Sicily in 415 B.C., exactly 45 years after the outbreak of the first Peloponnesian war. And if, like Thucydides, you believe that events "are very likely, in accordance with human nature, to repeat themselves at some future time, -- if not exactly the same, yet very similar." Then it might be worth your noting that 1962 -- the year we intervened militarily in South Vietnam -- was just 45 years after our entry into the first World War.

How Athenian Democracy Died

By EDISON E. SHRUM

The 5th century was the great age of Athenian democracy; its age of growth and prosperity. The 4th century, conversely, was the period of its decline and fall.

The real expansion came with the defeat of Persia in 479 B.C. "Greek history for the next forty years," says Wells (Outline of History), "is a story of comparative peace and tranquillity. There were wars," he adds, "but they were not intense wars."

There was, in fact, the first Peloponnesian war, 460-454 B.C. But this, like our first World War, served merely as a stimulant to the untouched homeland. By and large, though, it was a period of peace and economic well-being, money pouring in from a prosperous commerce and from the Delos confederacy defense fund, which alone amounted to about $600,000 a year.

After a period of struggle between the conservative leaders, Cimon and Thucydides, and the liberal leader, Pericles, the latter succeeded in inaugerating the first of the Athenian New Deals. The government was democratized, state funds distributed for immense public works projects, shows, festivals, jobs, etc., until virtually the whole city was subsisting on state pay. The new system, in the words of Plutarch, distributing "plenty through every age and condition." Plutarch adds, however, that these measures also brought a change in the character of the Athenians -- "from sober, thrifty people that maintained themselves by their own labors, to lovers of expense, intemperance, and license."

Plato (Gorgias) likewise mentions this change. He indicates that the system of state payments which Pericles introduced -- "corrupted the Athenians, rendering them idle, cowardly, talkative and avaricious."

These, of course, were hindsights, written after Pericles' death and after the real score was obvious. During Pericles' lifetime he was immensely popular, even though there was evidence he helped bring on the second Peloponnesian war, 431-421 B.C.,; which was far more destructive than the first had been. He held the post of Strategos longer (15 years) than anyone before or after him. His long tenure of office and great popularity made him able to change the entire character of the government. Athens, says Thucydides, "though still in name a democracy, was in fact ruled by her first citizen."

The period between the second and third Peloponnesian wars was that of the demagogues. Aristophanes, in his play, The Knights, has one of these demagogues saying: "I can pilfer and snatch, and supply you with loaves from another mn's batch." And again, when he was being solicited to become a candidate for office, objecting that he could "but barely read-- in a kind of way." And the character supporting his candidacy admitting that: "That does make against ye! --The being able to read in any way."

Plutarch significantly notes that Cleon, one of the most famous of the demagogues of that period -- "got great influence by his exertions to please the old men, who trusted him to find them fees."

The Peace of Nicias (421 B.C.), after a fashion, ended the second Peloponnesian war. In reality, though, it went on as a sort of cold war, fought through subordinate nations and allies.

Two of these allies, Egesta and Leontine, were in Sicily. Syracuse, also on the island of Sicily, was an ally of Sparta. Difficulties arose between Syracuse and Egesta and Leontine, the latter then soliciting the aid of Athens. Their envoys, reaching Athens in 416 B.C., argued that "the Syracusans, having already extinguished one ally of Athens (Leontine), were now hard pressing upon a second (Egesta), and would thus successively subdue them all." All they asked from Athens, said the Egestans, was a naval expedition, and they would pay the cost of that.

The two leading men in Athens at that time were Nicias and Alcibiades. The former, an elderly man of unimpeachable character, opposed the Athenians interfering in the Sicilian affair. Alcibiades, then 34, and extremely popular, was the leader of the war party. His main claim to fame at that time was his extravagance. It was said that his Sophist instructors had taught him "to laugh at common ideas of justice, temperance, holiness and patriotism." Above all, though, he was a master of deceit.

A special investigative commission sent to Egesta was deceived and perhaps even bribed into bringing back an over-optimistic report on the military and economic strength of the Egestans. In addition, Alcibiades, to overcome the slight remaining resistance to the expedition, engineered the appointment of Nicias as commander along with himself and Lamachus.

Nicias, however, was still not sold on the project. He told the Athenians that he thought they ought to take "further counsel" before "hastily plunging, at the instance of aliens, into a dangerous war noway belonging to them." He pointed out that they were "leaving many enemies behind, and that you will bring upon yourselves new enemies from thence to help them." And that what they had with Sparta was not really a peace, but merely a truce "that would endure only so long as your power remains unimpaired; but on your first serious reverse, the enemy (Sparta) will take the opportunity of assailing you." Sicily, he said, was so far away that no conquest of it could be permanent and that it was absurd to venture on so dangerous an expedition that could result in no permanent good.

All of which, by the way, was borne out by subsequent events. Nevertheless, Nicias' advice was ignored and massive preparations made for what was to be the "most splendid armament ever assembled by a Greek state."

Enthusiasm mounted almost to hysteria. Only Socrates, the philosopher, and Meton, the astronomer, who discovered the lunar cycle, still questioned the wisdom of the expedition -- the latter so strongly that he is said to have pretended insanity to avoid going along.

Before the expedition could get under way, a city-wide act of vandalism revealed the strange mental state then prevailing among the Athenians. Defacing of the Hermae, the small heads of the god, Mercury, customarily placed in the vestibules of homes and temples, apparently drove the Athenians over the brink. They suspected everybody of everything, from treason on down.

After the great expeditionary force left, it came to their attention that Alcibiades himself had once, during a drunken escapade, defaced a few images. This in their crazed condition, was sufficient grounds for calling Alcibiades home for prosecution. Instead of coming, Alcibiades deserted to the Spartans, leaving the unenthusiastic Nicias in command of the expedition.

It arrived in Sicily in 415 B.C., exactly 45 years after the outbreak of the first Peloponnesian war. And if, like Thucydides, you believe that events "are very likely, in accordance with human nature, to repeat themselves at some future time, -- if not exactly the same, yet very similar." Then it might be worth noting that 1962 -- the year we intervened militarily in South Vietnam -- was just 45 years after our entry into the first World War.

'Darshan' Might Help Some U.S. Politicians

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Westerners don't understand it and Indians cannot really explain it, but "darshan" helps make the wheels go around in India.

That being the case, astute Indian politicians pay plenty of attention to this Hindu phenomenon.

Darshan roughly translated means obtaining special merit, favor or godliness by touching, speaking to or merely being near a notable person.

As practiced, it means every Indian has a right to personally meet high-ranking officials and present complaints or grievances.

That's where the politics comes in.

Each day, hundreds of Indian petitioners with a wide assortment of problems gather in the streets and gardens outside the homes of national and state officials, who welcome this exposure to voters.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, though busy with affairs of state, sets aside a period each morning to grant darshan in the garden of her home.

A tent-like "shamiana" is erected to ward off monsoon rain showers. Carpets are laid over the muddy grass, and chairs are put out for the sad and solemn who come.

Mrs. Gandhi's darshan started shortly after 8 a.m. one day, after her personal secretary had screened out obvious cranks and security risks from petitioners standing in the street.

About 25 persons, from babes in arms to aged grandfathers, were waiting as the prime minister came out of the house wearing a brown and green sari. Everyone present jumped to his feet and returned her "namaste" salutation of hands folded before the face in a prayerful attitude.

Mrs. Gandhi can be businesslike to the point of brusqueness and she was this morning as she moved down the line, asking a quick question here, accepting a petition there.

A sad-faced young widow of a soldier killed on the China front in 1962 asked the prime minister to overrule a government official who ordered her evicted from army housing.

Mrs. Gandhi turned to a secretary and ordered an investigation.

A Hindu priest, Manik Lai, 52, explained he is unemployed because his temple in central India is run down and he has no money to repair it. He asked Mrs. Gandhi to "set it right so people can come and worship."

Mrs. Gandhi passed his petition to a secretary, and the priest turned away, offering to read bystanders' palms for a

A personal secretariat of 50 persons handles the followup of the daily darshan and 600-700 letters that arrive each day. They send urgent cables or letters to local officials involved and order a quick reply.

Mrs. Gandhi's personal letterhead helps break through the bureaucratic maze surrounding any individual Indian who has troubles.

'Darshan' Might Help Some U.S. Politicians

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Westerners don't understand it and Indians cannot really explain it, but "darshan" helps make the wheels go around in India.

That being the case, astute Indian politicians pay plenty of attention to this Hindu phenomenon.

Darshan roughly translated means obtaining special merit, favor or godliness by touching, speaking to or merely being near a notable person.

As practiced, it means every Indian has a right to personally meet high-ranking officials and present complaints or grievances.

That's where the politics comes in.

Each day, hundreds of Indian petitioners with a wide assortment of problems gather in the streets and gardens outside the homes of national and state officials, who welcome this exposure to voters.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, though busy with affairs of state, sets aside a period each morning to grant darshan in the garden of her home.

A tent-like "shamiana" is erected to ward off monsoon rain showers. Carpets are laid over the muddy grass, and chairs are put out for the sad and solemn who come.

Mrs. Gandhi's darshan started shortly after 8 a.m. one day, after her personal secretary had screened out obvious cranks and security risks from petitioners standing in the street.

About 25 persons, from babes in arms to aged grandfathers, were waiting as the prime minister came out of the house wearing a brown and green sari. Everyone present jumped to his feet and returned her "namaste" salutation of hands folded before the face in a prayerful attitude.

Mrs. Gandhi can be businesslike to the point of brusqueness and she was this morning as she moved down the line, asking a quick question here, accepting a petition there.

A sad-faced young widow of a soldier killed on the China front in 1962 asked the prime minister to overrule a government official who ordered her evicted from army housing.

Mrs. Gandhi turned to a secretary and ordered an investigation.

A Hindu priest, Manik Lal, 52, explained he is unemployed because his temple in central India is run down and he has no money to repair it. He asked Mrs. Gandhi to "set it right so people can come and worship."

Mrs. Gandhi passed his petition to a secretary, and the priest turned away, offering to read bystanders' palms for a

A personal secretariat of 50 persons handles the followup of the daily darshan and 600-700 letters that arrive each day. They send urgent cables or letters to local officials involved and order a quick reply.

Mrs. Gandhi's personal letterhead helps break through the bureaucratic maze surrounding any individual Indian who has troubles.

School With New System Gets First High School Pupils

By ANGELO NATAL

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — An educational revolution is under way at the Whitby School in this wealthy Fairfield County community—a revolution that so far involves only nine pupils.

These nine, and the 200 high schoolers that eventually will be enrolled in Whitby, are the first in their age group in the United States to be taught under the Montessori system.

Named after Maria Montessori, the Italian educator who devised the system, the method emphasizes free physical activity and informal and individual instruction.

Whitby is a private, coeducational school administered by Roman Catholic laymen. It has used the Montessori method since it started in 1958 with 18 pupils. There are 200 pupils at the school now, all but the nine high schoolers enrolled in what is equivalent to the elementary level.

Last September, without fanfare, Whitby pushed its program to the high school freshman level when the nine pupils crossed from the lower grades.

"Whitby is more than a school," says John P. Blessington, the school's headmaster, "it is a movement." Whitby "has become a leader in the national reappraisal of the science of learning."

Blessington, 33, says many educational leaders throughout the country encouraged Whitby to move forward into the higher grades.

The plan calls for establishment of a 10th-grade level this fall, bringing the high school enrollment to about 40. The 11th and 12th grades will be added in the next two years, providing a full high school curriculum to about 200 students by 1968.

The Montessori method leaves pupils more or less on their own, although under the guidance of teachers who prepare the educational environment, direct activity and function as authority.

At Whitby, the high school pupil works with a one-month "contract" outlined by the teacher, telling what the pupil is expected to accomplish in a variety of subjects.

It is up to the pupil to work things out for himself. He can neglect chemistry, for example, for a few weeks to concentrate on another subject. But he is expected to finish what has been outlined for him in chemistry by the end of the month.

The study of literature has its "required reading" list as in other high schools but the system is flexible.

One of the high-schoolers at Whitby, going through the library shelves, picked out a novel by Graham Greene, liked it and then read everything he could find by that author.

"He got on a Graham Greene kick, and we let him do that," Blessington said. "We changed his literature 'contract' accordingly. We figured that we'd let him come to grips with one author and then get him going on another."

The curriculum at Whitby is similar to those of other college preparatory schools. What is new is what is called the "subtle yet strong emphasis upon the student's experience level — and honest respect for each pupil's natural pace of working."

The attitude at Whitby is that the focus of education must always be on the individual.

Blessington is confident that the graduates of Whitby will retain more of what they have learned than graduates of other high schools because they will have done more of what they want to do.

"What they want to do" appears to be a major cause of criticism of the Montessori method by those who feel there is a loss of discipline.

Blessington already has experienced what is considered a problem in some other high schools. One of the Whitby high-schoolers plays with a small band and has let his hair grow long.

"If I get troubles from parents," Blessington told the boy, "then I'll tell you to cut your hair. But right now I don't care if you trip over it."

Teen-Age Girls Rally Behind No-Sex Pledge

READING, England (AP) — So many teen-age girls want to take a no-sex vow that Reading's League of Honor is in danger of collapse.

"It's all become too big for our small society to handle," said organizer Fred Jackman, 50.

Jackman, who has two teenage daughters, is secretary of the Reading Temperance Society, which founded the league several months ago. Girls were invited to sign a form pledging to renounce sex outside marriage, and encourage other youngsters to do the same.

The pledge became known locally as "the virgins' charter."

Word of its existence spread to other parts of England and to countries overseas. The result, said the worried organizer, was that hundreds of girls wrote to Reading asking for copies of the pledge. It is becoming just too much work for Jackman.

"What we need now," he told a reporter, "is someone interested in the scheme to take over as national secretary. Unpaid, I'm afraid."

LIFE AND REMINISCENCE

Perhaps I am wrong as I do not think that we should live in the past but when memory comes flooding back it is consoling to release some of the past.

My thoughts carry me back to things that occurred before the turn of the century. This article relates to ball playing and concerns two individuals that are still among the living.

When we were boys there was a little park in the town of Blodgett, Mo. At this time this town had all the records as the greatest growers and shippers of watermelons in the world.

History will bear me out in this.

A short ways from our home was a beautiful little park. In this park was a ball diamond and there were three that were bases. I do not know who the organizer of the diamond was but I think that nature helped him.

The game that we played here was called Town Ball. We had a hard rubber ball and it was hard.

First bounce was out and the cross cut.

As I was older and became a school boy, my teacher started us in hard ball so Hal was not in this picture.

My teacher was Robt Buck who later became a county official. He made a catcher of me and after a broken thumb I later played all the positions of the field. I did not want to make this a lengthy article and will try and bring Hal back into the picture.

He is retired and lives in Morley.

Boy did he have it and he lost it at Chaffee, Mo. on Sunday and Labor Day. He was under contract with the Browns and he made them look like a bunch of schoolboys in an exhibition game at Caruthersville prior to his loss.

Showless Joe Jackson was playing third base in this game and he walked out to the mound and told Hal that dam ball is hopping a foul. Hal replied I know that is the reason they can't hit it.

Ask Hal how many of the glass insulators that we broke on the old St. Louis and from Mountain R. Way.

The Pirates are gone but the old dump is still here.

The raven once a universal symbol of dark prophecy, is actually a clever bird of fearless habits which must survive by its wits since it has never been protected by law. The common raven looks like the crow in appearance but is much larger, with a wingspread of four feet. The raven is a hardy bird with an average life span of between 30 and 35 years. Ravens can be tamed when young and learn to imitate words.

Teen-Age Girls Rally Behind No-Sex Pledge

READING, England (AP) — So many teen-age girls want to take a no-sex vow that Reading's League of Honor is in danger of collapse.

"It's all become too big for our small society to handle," said organizer Fred Jackman, 50.

Jackman, who has two teenage daughters, is secretary of the Reading Temperance Society, which founded the league several months ago. Girls were invited to sign a form pledging to renounce sex outside marriage, and encourage other youngsters to do the same.

The pledge became known locally as "the virgins' charter."

Word of its existence spread to other parts of England and to countries overseas. The result, said the worried organizer, was that hundreds of girls wrote to Reading asking for copies of the pledge. It is becoming just too much work for Jackman.

"What we need now," he told a reporter, "is someone interested in the scheme to take over as national secretary. Unpaid, I'm afraid."

LIFE AND REMINISCENCE

Perhaps I am wrong as I do not think that we should live in the past but when memory comes flooding back it is consoling to release some of the past.

My thoughts carry me back to things that occurred before the turn of the century. This article relates to ball playing and concerns two individuals that are still among the living.

When we were boys there was a little park in the town of Blodgett, Mo. At this time this town had all the records as the greatest growers and shippers of watermelons in the world.

History will bear me out in this.

A short ways from our home was a beautiful little park. In this park was a ball diamond and there were three that were bases. I do not know who the organizer of the diamond was but I think that nature helped him.

The game that we played here was called Town Ball. We had a hard rubber ball and it was hard.

First bounce was out and the cross cut.

As I was older and became a school boy, my teacher started us in hard ball so Hal was not in this picture.

My teacher was Robt Buck who later became a county official. He made a catcher of me and after a broken thumb I later played all the positions of the field. I did not want to make this a lengthy article and will try and bring Hal back into the picture.

He is retired and lives in Morley.

Boy did he have it and he lost it at Chaffee, Mo. on Sunday and Labor Day. He was under contract with the Browns and he made them look like a bunch of schoolboys in an exhibition game at Caruthersville prior to his loss.

Showless Joe Jackson was playing third base in this game and he walked out to the mound and told Hal that dam ball is hopping a foul. Hal replied I know that is the reason they can't hit it.

Ask Hal how many of the glass insulators that we broke on the old St. Louis and from Mountain R. Way.

The Pirates are gone but the old dump is still here.

matter of fact

The raven once a universal symbol of dark prophecy, is actually a clever bird of fearless habits which must survive by its wits since it has never been protected by law. The common raven looks like the crow in appearance but is much larger, with a wingspread of four feet. The raven is a hardy bird with an average life span of between 30 and 35 years. Ravens can be tamed when young and learn to imitate words.

Emphysema Eats Holes In Tissue of Lungs

EDITOR'S NOTE — A chronic cough? Short of breath? It may be nothing at all. But it may also be symptoms of early emphysema, a lung disease causing increasing concern among doctors. The following, second in a four-part series on emphysema, tells of some new advances in treatment.

By FRANK CAREY
AP SCIENCE WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) — You have an area equivalent of two tennis courts inside your chest — and health authorities are growing increasingly worried about a lung disease, emphysema, which puts "holes in the tennis courts."

It does its lethal work by attacking tiny, bubble-like air sacs -- numbering 750 million in the tissue of the lungs. If the walls of these air sacs were spread out in a sheet, they'd occupy the area of two tennis courts.

A whisker-thin sheet of tissue sliced lengthwise from an emphysema-ridden lung — that is, an advanced case —looks like a motheaten scarf.

A slice as thick as a piece of steak shows large transparent areas that resemble the remains of a jellyfish tossed up on a beach. They contrast sharply with dense areas of still healthy tissue around them.

Doctors of the U.S. Public Health Service recently formed Chronic Respiratory Diseases Program — CRDP — contend that Emphysema — together with its frequent fellow traveler, chronic bronchitis-- constitute a category of ills "which has been neglected by both official and private medicine largely due to a mixture of misinformation and defeatism."

They grant that no drug or other cure has yet been unearthed for emphysema — and no easy way to reverse the action of its stealthy sidekick, chronic bronchitis. As a result, "both patients and physicians have come to regard them as virtually hopeless."

But, says Dr. Wilfred David, acting chief of the Health Service Division of Chronic Diseases which organized the program, advances have been made by a few investigators and hospitals in treating sufferers -- especially late-stage cases -- and in rehabilitating significant numbers of them.

So the job now, he and other officials say, is to see to it that the message gets around, to demonstrate the value of establishing additional detection and treatment clinics, to make sure doctors everywhere are kept abreast of the latest information; and finally, to combat "the pessimism of all too many practitioners."

But what's this disease all about?

It dates back at least to the ancient Greeks and Romans, medical historians say.

It wasn't until more than 125 years ago that Laennec, the first physician to employ the newly developed stethoscope, noted a form of breathing obstruction that later became known as emphysema.

That's the Greek word for inflation, or blown up. And emphysema means a blown-up lung.

To understand it, think first of a tree placed upside down in your chest with the trunk extending into your throat. That's your "bronchial tree" -- the lifeline for your breathing.

The trunk is your windpipe. From it shoot two main branches called bronchi —one going to the right lung, the other to the left.

From each, within the lung, even smaller offshoots branch off, with the smallest, or twigs being called bronchioles.

At the end of each of thousangs of bronchiles is a nest of air sacs called alveoli.

The sponge-like lung expands upon inhalation because these alveoli sop up air instead of water. Moreover, these tiny air sacs are the lungs' real work horses.

They're the end of the line for the air you inhale with every breath and act as exchange depots for life-sustaining oxygen carried in your inhaled breath, and waste carbon dioxide contained in exhaled breath.

Through the membranous walls of the air sacs, oxygen passes into the tiny blood vessels — capillaries — that enmesh the sacs. And carbon dioxide is automatically tapped from the blood vessels.

In emphysema, the walls of the air sacs begin to be eaten away, though the extent and rate differs in individuals.

This results in groups of ruptured air sacs combining to form larger sacs which tend to trap stale air containing carbon dioxide inside the lung. Also, the lung begins to lose its wondrous elasticity, like an old rubber band, and becomes blown up.

Moreover, some of the small airway bronchioles which ordinarily pass expired air up through the bronchial tree collapse inward and become partially blocked to expired airflow.

Upshot is that the swollen lung becomes inefficient in its life-sustaining pumping action; roadblocks form for expired air; the body's tissues become partly starved for oxygen; and noxious carbon dioxide can pile up in the blood. In severe cases, the heart can be affected.

Strangely, inhalation is not obstructed by emphysema's deviltry. However, as more air comes in from outside, and becomes partly trapped, the increased pressure causes larger air traps — called bullae — to form inside the lungs.

Also, if the emphysema patient also has chronic bronchitis, he's in for further trouble.

As Dr. James W. Raleigh, medical director of the National Tuberculosis Association explains it:

Bronchitis involves a thickening of the inner lining of the bronchial tubes, especially the larger ones, so the airway passages are narrowed. Also, there's an oversecretion of mucus, the normal lubricant of the passages, and a clogging of the whiplike, tiny hairs called cilia, which usually act to move unwanted irritants, like dust particles, out of the airways towards the mouth.

Mostly, the airway obstructing action of bronchitis affects outward air flow.

So, that's the anatomical picture of emphysema. What's it look like from the outside, in its effect on the patient?

There may be a chronic cough. Shortness of breath — called dyspnea by the medics — may vary from mild distress upon exertion in early or not extensive cases to severe gasping episodes and cyanosis — a blueing of the lips and other areas from insufficient oxygen — even when the patient is resting. Some patients cough up mucus.

"These people even work hard — breathing — when they're asleep," Dr. Sumner Cohen of Mt. Sinai Hospital, Minneapolis, told the reporter.

How do the patients themselves react?

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., 69, second-ranking member of the Senate from the seniority standpoint, says:

"I've learned to live with it. I think mine is an arrested case — dating from 1958 when it was first diagnosed — and I quit smoking, although I had been real short of breath since about 1955.

"A doctor before that had told me I had asthma, and he told me to quit smoking, but I didn't — and I'd been smoking 1½ to two packs of cigarettes a day for almost 40 years.

"But when a doctor diagnosed it as emphysema in 1958, he told me it would continue to get worse, and possibly take me away, unless I quit smoking.

"As long as I'm at my desk, I'm okay. But it cuts my breath if I overexert myself.

"Yes, every morning right after I get up, I take those medicines you squirt down your throat —decongestants or bronchodilators as they're called. They make kind of a mist. And I try to blow all the air out of my lungs. I can't get started in the morning until I do that.

"But, during the rest of the day, I don't have any great deal of difficulty."

Says Elizabeth Hayes, 57, Minneapolis, Minn., who had to give up her job as a grocery clerk because of her illness, and is an outpatient at Mt. Sinai Hospital in that city:

"Some days are worse than others. Sometimes, I have all I can do to walk to the bathroom from the bedroom. I go to prepare something to eat, and then I'm too exhausted to eat it.

"Shortness of breath? Sometimes you feel almost as though you're going to suffocate, especially during hot spells, or again when it's very cold. And you get so doggone nervous — and the more nervous you get, the worse you breathe. I try not to panic because when you do, there again your breathing gets worse."

"Shortness of breath? Sometimes you feel almost as though you're going to suffocate, especially during hot spells, or again when it's very cold. And you get so doggone nervous — and the more nervous you get, the worse you breathe. I try not to panic because when you do, there again your breathing gets worse."

ABOUT OUR SCHOOLS

by LYNN TWITTY

About everybody believes in the public school, like they do in mother love, the American flag and apple pie. Most of us are firmly convinced that education is necessary for individual and common good and for the national welfare. We don't always agree on how to accomplish it. If we need specifics to back this belief in the necessity for more education here they are: the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that there is a crisis in filling such professional and technical jobs as engineers, teachers, nurses, social workers and draftsmen, because we are not educating enough people in these areas. They report that the U. S. employment service has 14,000 to 16,000 unfilled professional openings in every two - week report for the last year. Another area of shortage, although not so acute, is in machinist, machine shop workers, mechanics and repairmen, welders, tool makers, and pattern and model makers. In spite of increased college enrollment, the supply lags far behind the demand.

The BLS predicts that 1.5 million technicians will be needed in 1975. There are now about 875,000. About one - half of those -- 400,000 -- will have to be replaced by 1975 because of death, transfer to other fields, retirement, etc. 650,000 will then be needed to fill new jobs. This means about 85--90,000 technicians should be trained each year.

The following is a quotation from a Report Organization, Structure and Financing of School and Junior Colleges, just completed by the Academy for Educational Development, for the Missouri Governor's Conference on Education: "In the past Missouri did not invest as heavily in her public school system as some other states. Today, adults 25 years of age or older in the state have completed, on the average, only 9.6 years of schooling, or a full year less than the median for the nation.

As indicated earlier in this report, there is a close relationship in our society between an individual's schooling and his potential income and expected employment opportunities. Hence, if permitted to continue, the gap between Missouri's educational standard and that of the country as a whole can be expected to result in lower average earning power of individuals and a lower economic level for the state.

The economy of a state is also closely related to the number of college graduates in its population. In 1960, the number of people in Missouri's population who had completed four or more years of college was only 81 percent of the national average -- further evidence of under - investment in education by the state (in this case in higher education).

The under - investment in education in Missouri is even more striking in an analysis among counties. In 1960 there were 29 counties in Missouri with a median educational level of 8.6 years or lower -- two full years below the United States median and one year below the median for the state.

Although no one can say that low educational attainment necessarily causes low income, there is no doubt that statistics indicate there is a relationship between these two factors. In order to break the intergenerational cycle of low income-low education - low income, we believe the start must be made with the schools."

The Governor's Committee will make the completed report to about 600 Missourians, selected to represent all areas of the state, at a meeting to be held in Columbia, Thursday, September 29th-30th. We assume that the recommendation contained in the report will eventually go to the legislature. Whatever action the legislature takes will probably be dependent upon the reaction of Missouri citizens toward the improvement of our schools, a move which Missouri needs and can well afford.

We believe that school opening last week was the best we have yet experienced. Naturally everything did not run exactly as we desired or as we planned it, but there was a minimum of "foul-up." We attribute this to the very excellent planning which took place during the summer by the administrative staff and especially to that by the faculty, completed in the pre - school orientation workshop. From a standing start to transporting about 2,500 students, full classes for 3,900 students on the first day and to serving over 3,000 noon-time lunches are just a few of the details of getting underway. We believe is no small feat. This is not to say, of course, that there were not some displacements, errors and confusion but we are proud of the school employees who were responsible and for the cooperation of students and their parents.

Now we hope to be able to make some improvements each day toward our Board of Education and faculty's aim of ever better educational services for the school.

State Stepping Up Industrial Safety Inspection

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Missouri's division of industrial inspection is stepping up its program of safety inspection because of a sharp increase in the number of industrial accidents.

George Flexsenhar, division director, said today that in the first six months of this year there were 49,329 industrial accidents, causing 35 deaths and resulting in an estimated cost of $10 million.

Missouri's phenomenal growth as an industrial state has naturally resulted in thousands of additional employes in factories and related activities," Flexsenhar said.

"However, we are rapidly stepping up our program of safety inspections to cope with the problem and plan a complete overhaul of our safety educational program."

Instead of a n annual safety seminar in Jefferson City, he said, there will be quarterly meetings in Kansas City, Springfield, St. Louis, Joplin, St. Joseph and Jefferson City. Safety inspections also will be increased, especially at quarries and construction sites.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

by Walter Millis

POSSIBLE LINES OF SOLUTION

The problems of freedom and liberty in this complex field are not readily resolved; but it would seem that solution would have to be looked for along certain avenues. One rough but very practical solution has been advanced. It would be simply to require that every classification stamp carry a time - limit. Today, once a paper is classified it automatically remains classified for eternity, unless it undergoes a complicated and always difficult process of de-classification. Under this proposal, the paper would automatically cease to be classified at the expiry of the time - limit, unless a similarly complicated and difficult process determined that the stamp should remain. The value of the suggestion is apparent; unfortunately, so is the likelihood that bureaucratic routine would soon overwhelm it and that to continue the classification would become as automatic a process as the original classification is now.

Effective solutions would seem to lie along the lines of, first, a genuine re - examination of the uses and effects of both secrecy and intelligence in the relations of modern peoples. It should be made with a clear understanding that, as has been suggested, the true problem here is not one of catching and punishing spies; it is a problem in the proper formulation and protection of over - all national policy. From such a re - examination it might be possible to proceed to a second step, a much more precise definition of the categories of information for which protection is really essential to the national security, and a separation of all other forms of secrecy from the imperatives of security and the penalties imposed in its name. The present categories of "confidential," "secret," and "top secret" fail in two ways. They make no real distinction between the material involved--some, with experience in these matters, have said that they could see no effective difference in the security important of the "confidential" and "top secret" information they have received; the designation seems largely a matter of administrative convenience, since more cylinder locks, guards, and similar precautions must be used with "top secret" than with "confidential," and these protections can make business impossibly time - consuming. The categories likewise fail in leaving to the administrator no good method of controlling information which for administrative or other reasons ought to be kept confidential, but concerning which the national security significance is minimal or non - existent.
